Delbos to Knit French Allies, Quiet Fear of Nazis in Tour

Foreign Minister to Ask Pledges From Poland, Little Entente.

Britain Maintains 'Active Interest'

Powers Refuse to Give Hitler a Free Hand in Central Europe.

World Peace Situation.

Foreign Minister Delbos will visit Warsaw and Little Entente capitals to strengthen France's position and allay fears Britain may abandon eastern Europe to Hitler. Japan reportedly landed 50,000 troops in South China, apparently for a drive on Canton.—Page 11.

Delbos to Travel.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Dec. 1.—Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos will leave tomorrow on a tour of four capitals to patch France's political fences and to seek to quiet fears Britain may be ready to abandon eastern Europe to Germany.

His trip, to last 17 days, will take him to Warsaw and the Little Entente capitals, Bucharest, Belgrade and Praha.

He hopes to get a new promise from Poland, Rumania, Yugoslavia and Czechoslavak. of faithfulness to their alliances with France.

Speaking on behalf of both Britain and France, following a mandate given him in London during the recent Anglo-French consultation, Delbos will give France's allies assurance Britain stands with his country in "taking an active interest" in eastern European affairs and had refused to give Germany a free hand in Central Europe.

Concessions Sought.

Informed sources in London said Britain and France would sound out Czechoslovakia and Austria on their willingness to make concessions to Germany on the problem of German minorities within their borders.

The French foreign minister also will sound out the leaders of the four nations on a plan stated to have been broached in London for negotiation of a nine-power European pact.

Members of the proposed pact would include France, Germany, Britain, Italy, Belgium, Poland and the Little Entente nations.

It was said here such a proposal, although hardly favored by France because of the exclusion of her ally Soviet Russia, was being pushed by the British as a means of forming a workable "little League of Nations" to manage European affairs alone.

First Trip Since 1934.

Delbos' trip will be the first by a French foreign minister to his country's eastern allies since 1934.

The problems facing Delbos are considered to be the same as in 1934:

1. He must strengthen the desire of the more-or-less wavering states to resist falling into the political orbit of an ever-stronger Germany.

2. He must serve the ancient French fear that a Germany all-powerful in central and eastern Europe would soon march west against France.

In Warsaw, Delbos will attempt to convince Poland of the need for more cordial relations with Soviet Russia and Czechoslovakia.

In Bucharest, he will seek Rumanian agreement to a military alliance with Czechoslovakia "good for all occasions."

Signs of increasing friendship between Yugoslavia on the one hand and Germany and Italy on the other have disturbed French diplomacy.

Christmas Fund to Aid 25 Neediest Families

The Post Will Collect Money for 'Unemployed Employables,' for Whom No Relief Agency Is Able to Provide.

The Washington Post Christmas Fund this year will be devoted to assistance for the 25 neediest families in the District.

These families have been selected by the Council of Social Agencies from the ranks of that desperate group known as "unemployed employables"—in other words decent, willing, but penniless families without jobs.

The plight of these families, with mouths to feed, children to clothe, and no jobs in sight, is causing the Council of Social Agencies the greatest concern.

The Welfare Department cannot help them, because its appropriations have been cut.

The WPA cannot give them work, because its appropriations were slashed to the point where certified relief workers had to be laid off.

They are not eligible for help under social security, which extends only to the aged, the blind, and dependent children, with rigid provisions attached.

They are not "chronic" charity cases, always seeking help.

They are honest American families, down on their luck and needing only that temporary helping hand to meet a black crisis.

They have no need for the Christmas presents that would please them in other years. They need cash for rent, for fuel, for clothes.

Each case has been carefully checked. The character of each family is known to the expert workers of the Council. The Council would like to help, but is absolutely unable to do so, for there is no provision in any relief fund for them.

They are not sick. They are not crippled. They would jump at the chance to support themselves. But right now they are literally half-starved, cold and ill-clad.

The stories of these families will be presented in a series of articles that will follow in The Post. They will not be sob stories, aimed at wringing tears. They will be factual stories, giving a true picture of deserving people, who are being driven to desperate measures—fathers missing, mothers offering their children to the court because there is not aid for healthy, but jobless, parents.

This is one of the richest, finest cities in the world.

Read these stories and consider whether or not you can find that odd dollar to help against empty stomachs and despair in Washington on Christmas.

Report Rejects One-Man Rule Of Civil Service

Brookings Institution Opposes Proposal of Roosevelt.

By James D. Secrest.

Opposition to the abolition of the three-man Civil Service Commission and its replacement by a single administrator was declared yesterday by the Brookings Institution in a report on "Personnel Administration in the Federal Government."

A single administrator of the civil service act was recommended by President Roosevelt as part of the Federal Government reorganization plan and is still incorporated in the Senate draft of the proposal.

At the same time, the Brookings Institution reported adversely on suggestions for requiring competitive examinations for promotions in the civil service.

"Favoritism" Charged.

The latest of such recommendations came from Senator Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, author of a Senate resolution to conduct an inquiry into the administration of the civil service laws. Ellender charged that "petty bureau chiefs" based promotions on "favoritism" rather than merit.

The civil service report, prepared by Lewis Meriam, was the second critical survey made of the President's recommendations for governmental reorganization. Last January it attacked the proposal that independent boards and commissions be placed under departmental heads.

After surveying the Government personnel situation broadly, the Brookings Institution report summarizes its reasons for preferring the continuance of the three-man Civil Service Commission thus:

"1. In matters vital to the interests of applicants and to civil servants, the Civil Service Commission en banc is the court of last resort. In our judicial system courts of last resort are not one-man courts. Protection against the arbitrary action of a single individual is essential.

"2. Broad questions of polic came

Tents Sought For Overflow At Workhouse

Population Is Approaching All-Time Record, Huff Reports to Board.

Population of the District of Columbia Workhouse at Occoquan has grown so fast that tents are needed to house the inmates, Ray L. Huff, general superintendent of the District of Columbia Penal Institutions, disclosed yesterday in a memorandum to the Board of Public Welfare.

Addressed to Elwood Street, director of the board, the memorandum states:

"The workhouse is close approaching its all-time record. We are taking steps to secure the loan of tents to house the population here. Double-decker beds are being used in the workhouse dormitories. This rapid expansion appears to be unprecedented. It will obviously make heavy demands on our power and other means of control.

"We call special attention to the fact that the commitments received last month were longer than usual with the result the reduction in population will lag behind new commitments, especially in view of the fact that these are the winter months."

The memorandum, Street said, would be used in his bimonthly report to the Board of Public Welfare.

Huff also called attention to a recent disorder in the women's division which tends to focus attention on the severe needs of this division.

In the report of the board, Street praised as noteworthy the service of Dr. James Lewald, superintendent of the District Training School at Laurel, Md., and Mrs. Margaret Corridon, head matron of the jail, in getting under control the situation at the National Training School for Girls.

A committee, to act in an advisory capacity for the board, has been appointed by Dr. Thomas E. Neil, president of the D. C. Medical Society, Street said, including Drs. F. X. McGovern, Lewis C. Ecker, W. Warren Saeger, William J. Stanton and A. Magruder MacDonald.

Big Business Parley Called By President

Invites Group Honoring Roper to Iron Out Their Problems.

Commerce Head Cites Need of Revising Tax Structure.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 1.—President Roosevelt today invited business leaders attending a dinner in honor of Secretary of Commerce Daniel Roper to meet with him "at the earliest practicable date."

In a wire to business and industrial executives who are members of the Commerce Department's business advisory council, the President said, in part:

"I am looking forward to meeting with all of you at the earliest practicable date so we may have the opportunity of talking over the problems that affect us so vitally. I am confident that appropriate action can lead to increased employment and more effective purchasing power in the hands of great masses of people still without adequate income."

Cites Tax Revision.

Secretary Roper cited "need of a general revision of our entire tax structure" in a speech to the council.

He expressed confidence the "utilities dilemma" will be solved, advocated equal responsibility between labor organizations and management, stressed importance of reducing the national debt as well as balancing the budget, espoused "immediate and constructive" treatment of railroad financial problems, and hailed the projected building construction program.

Discussing the tax on undistributed corporate earnings, Roper said:

"Treasury records indicate that the tax did lead to a marked increase in the percentage of corporate profits disbursed as dividends during 1936 and there is evidence to show that the tax also caused increases in corporate operating expenses in the area of wages, bonuses, advertising, maintenance, research, etc. It is already evident that such situations are receiving the sympathetic consideration of the Treasury in its recommendations to Congress on the revision of the 1938 revenue act, as indicated by Secretary Morgenthau's recent statement and in the President's message to Congress on November 15."

Secretary Roper said general revision of the tax setup is needed "to simplify the determination of tax liability, to distribute the burden more equitably and to broaden the base of taxation so as to include a larger percentage of our earning population while providing that "no one should be overburdened."

Old Coney Island Doomed; Modern Resort Is Planned

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 1.—Knelling "the end of the old Coney Island, fabled in song and story," Park Commissioner Robert Moses submitted a $16,150,000 program to Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia today for a sweeping clean-up of three of New York's great playgrounds of millions.

The gigantic rehabilitation and beautification program — affecting Coney Island, Rockaway Beach and South Beach, Staten Island—would modernize the seaside meccas and transform them into pleasant, spic and span resorts, instead of the raucous, blaring, paper-littered strands now in existence.

Rail Leaders See Solvency In Rate Rise

Executives Tell I. C. C. Rising Costs Peril Future Credit.

Willard and Others Hint at Service, Pay Roll Cuts Next Year.

By Sidney Olson.

Hammering away at their chief argument for a 15 per cent freight-rate increase, presidents of the Nation's biggest railroads told the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday the constantly narrowing spread between income and outgo threatens not only future credit of the railroads, but, in some cases, their solvency.

Silver-haired Daniel Willard, president of the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad for the last 28 years, summed up much of the testimony when, after sketching a dark picture of mounting costs and declining revenues, he said:

"It is clearly apparent that the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad could not continue to render adequate service and remain solvent with the existing volume of business and with rates and costs as they are at present."

Mass of Data Offered.

Rail moguls who pleaded with the I. C. C. for rates that would permit carriers to earn adequate revenues included, besides Willard, F. E. Williamson, president, New York Central system; M. W. Clement, president, Pennsylvania Railroad system; S. T. Bledsoe, president, Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway Co.; Charles Donnelly, president, Northern Pacific Railway Co.; Wilson McCarthy, trustee, Denver & Rio Grande Western Railroad Co., and H. A. Scandrett, trustee, Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific Railroad Co.

The carrier chieftains piled up a mass of data to support their argument that a rate increase is the industry's only avenue of escape from pressure of mounting costs, wages and taxes, coupled with dropping revenues.

The tall New York Central head, Williamson, told the commission costs have increased so steeply that the unusually small net income of the last fiscal year—$15,000,000—would have been turned into a $17,000,000 deficit if present conditions had obtained at that time. He said:

"We estimate that in order to handle the volume of traffic similar to that handled in the year ended June 30, 1937, at present wages, at present prices of materials and supplies and at the various social security and other tax rates to be in

Greyhound Strike Settled; Drivers Get $15 Pay Raise

By the United Press.

Cleveland, Dec. 1.—Striking Greyhound bus drivers tonight ended a week-old, 16-State walkout, accepting a contract granting pay increases but denying the other major strike demand—a closed shop.

The settlement was announced by John L. Conner, Federal labor conciliator, after conferences with management representatives and officials of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, sponsor of the walkout.

Under the agreement, Conner said, drivers will receive average increases of about $15 per month per man. Average pay at present is between $180 and $250 per month. The base for lower salaried drivers and extra men was broadened.

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—Mayor F. H. LaGuardia formally has become a member of the American Labor Party, cutting any last thin tie with his old nominal Republican affiliation.

Membership in a third party would aid him in any plan to step out nationally, independent of the old parties, it is believed.

Measure Gains Support Amid Charges of Trading and Pressure.

Wallace Proposes Milder Crop Curb

Prospects Brighter After Labor Threatens to Scuttle Farm Bill.

By Robert C. Albright.

Amid charges of "pressure" and "trades," House signatures on the wages and hours bill petition yesterday increased to within eight of the 218 needed to force action this session on the controversial labor measure.

The sudden spurt of signatures, including several from the deep South, brought from leaders predictions the petition "positively" will be fully signed before Saturday—deadline for wage bill action in the special session.

Speaker Bankhead said "it looks like it will go over tomorrow." Chairman Mary T. Norton, of the House Labor Committee, flatly said it will be "signed up." And Patrick Boland, diminutive House whip, merely smiled and said he had seven more names "promised."

Spurt Follows Threats.

Rush of 17 names to the petition yesterday followed unusual activity by the House whip organization, individual calls to members by Labor's Nonpartisan League, and threats by urban laborites to block the farm bill unless rural members support the wages measure.

Boland denied all charges of "deals," but declared bluntly that in his opinion the farm bill would be sent back to committee unless the House discharged the rules committee from deadlocked consideration of the wages bill.

But Representative Martin Dies (Democrat), of Texas, bitter opponent of labor bill action, declared "they're making all kinds of deals and trades." He charged proposed action on the Florida ship canal bill accounted for some of the signatures, and fears the farm bill would be wrecked accounted for others.

The imminent break in the wages bill stalemate found both houses still bogged down in farm bill debate, with no apparent chance of a House farm bill vote before Saturday. A movement was under way in the Senate to prolong farm debate until the House acts, and then to attempt to substitute the House bill for the more drastic Senate farm measure.

Stiffening the back of this movement was the open opposition of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace and AAA officials to several features of the Senate's drastic bill.

In a letter yesterday to Senators

Wallace Urges Farm Bill Aid For Consumers

Ease Crop Controls to Let Granary Overflow, He Advises.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace "wholly in a spirit of helpfulness"—yesterday advised the Senate the farm bill it is considering does not protect consumers sufficently. He proposed that much larger reserves be built up before compulsory control features of the bill go into effect.

"I know," he wrote Senators Pope, Idaho, and McGill, Kansas, Democratic coauthors of the bill, "that the reason for making this reduction (in the requirement for such carryovers) was apprehension on the part of some that increases in reserves might depress corn and wheat prices.

"But the bill seems to be already well guarded against this. The reserves of both corn and wheat would be tightly held off the market until needed. The loans on corn, and to some degree on wheat, would be protective, and the plan would be backed up by marketing quotas.

"It seems to me that if the consumers are going to grant to farmers the right to protect agriculture against surpluses, the farmers have a duty to protect consumers against crop shortage."

Wallace also suggested changes in financial provisions of the legislation. He said estimated cost of the

2 Wire Firms Charged by U.S. As Monopolies

Justice Department Names Western Union, Postal as Law Breakers.

The Department of Justice yesterday charged the Western Union and Postal Telegraph Companies with violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, in what was interpreted as a phase of the Administration drive to curb monopolies.

Contracts of the two companies for "exclusive use and occupancy" of "strategic locations" were the target of the department in the charges, contained in two petitions filed in Southern Federal district of New York, the department said.

The contracts complained of were with railroad companies, hotels and others, and involved exclusive rights-of-way for poles along railroads as well as office locations.

"By these contracts," the department's statement here asserted, "each of the defendants has engaged in a combination in restraint of, and has attempted to monopolize, interstate trade and commerce in telegraphic communication."

Filing of the petitions came on the heels of a speech by Attorney General Homer S. Cummings in New York Monday calling for "thorough overhauling' of the anti-trust laws, and while President Roosevelt was conferring aboard the yacht Potomac with Assistant Attorney General Robert H. Jackson on the same subject.

D.C. Airman Missing With Aide As Plane Crashes Into Ocean

Naval Aviation Cadet James J. Jones, son of George P. Jones, special assistant in the Department of Justice, was lost last night with a flying companion in the icy Atlantic off the Virginia Coast.

Missing with Jones was Aviation Machinist Mate Troy W. Blanton, of Lafayette, Ala. Fragments of their scout plane were washed ashore at Virginia Beach, Va., ten minutes after residents of the beach resort saw the naval craft roar into the ocean a few hundred yards off shore.

In the hope Jones and Blanton might have escaped with the lifebelts, planes last night scoured the flare-lit waters, and all Navy ships in the vicinity were ordered to join the search. Jones' brother was granted permission to fly in a naval plane to take part.

Jones, 26 years old, attended North Dakota State College, leaving to accept a place with the Treasury Department. Later he

Artificial Siamese Twins Will Be Made Here When D.C. Boy Gives Girl 24 Ounces of Flesh

He is told that he is helping to make medical history, that he is a hero in the highest sense, but 16-year-old John Melvin Bonner, who will give a pound and a half of flesh to a girl he scarcely knows, is anxious only over his chances of graduating from junior high school.

John—they call him Junior, but he doesn't like to be called Junior—is going to be a surgically made Siamese twin for a period of about five weeks early next year.

He is going to be joined, near the waist line, by an 18-inch tube graft of his own flesh to a 13-year-old girl, with both of them subject to every complication and exigency that confronts a true pair of Siamese twins. In this instance, the complications and exigencies will be especially severe, for most of the Siamese twins known to medical science have been of the same sex.

Already the plucky ninth-grader at Shaw Junior High School has undergone the first of several operations preliminary to the strange union. Yesterday he interrupted his school work at his home, 1716 New Jersey avenue northwest, long enough to expose the surgical dressings on his left side which hide a pair of slits extending continuously from the armpit to his hip.

The story of John and Clara, a story that is virtually assured of a ranking niche in medical literature if the Siamese-twin operation is successful, goes back nearly a year to a shanty on the North Carolina landscape, out in the country near a hamlet called Edenton.

Clara Howard, 12, and colored, was shelling peanuts. When her apron was filled with hullz, she went to empty them into an open fire. Her dress caught. In a moment she was enveloped in flames.

Clara was taken to a rural hospital. Practically all of her upper body—chest, arms and neck especially—was a mass of burns. The fact that she survived is remarkable in itself, say those who are looking after her. When she

Gift, Estate Tax Revision Asked By Committee

House Group Seeks to Add $15,000,000 to U. S. Income.

A House Ways and Means subcommittee yesterday turned temporarily from revision of oppressive business taxes to approve revenue-producing "simplification" of complex estate and gift tax schedules.

Chairman Fred M. Vinson, of the House tax sub-committee, estimated that "rearrangement" of estate and gift tax rates, coupled with lowered exemptions, would produce more than $15,000,000 in additional yield to the Treasury.

Although Vinson has insisted that tentatively approved modifications of the undivided profits and capital gains taxes would mean little if any loss in revenue, the sub-committee is seeking to guard against tax revision loss of funds by "picking up" revenue wherever possible.

Relief Assured.

Meanwhile, a House move was anticipated within the next week to further assure businessmen, battling a recession, of the relief they may expect from tax changes next session. Still under discussion is a statement reflecting views of the Administration, of a reassuring tenor. It has not been determined whether the statement will be made from the House floor.

In the Senate, the fight for action this session has not been completely abandoned, it was learned yesterday. One plan under discussion among "immediate action" Senators would use the House farm bill, carrying penalty taxes for over-quota farm sales, as the instrument for a Senate tax rider. But the House farm bill would first have to be substituted for the Senate farm measure.

Methods Altered.

In revising estate and gift tax schedules yesterday, the House tax sub-committee left the impact of the rates actually as they are now, but altered methods of applying them and tapped more revenue by lowering exemptions.

As tentatively agreed to, the adjusted rates would range from .4 per cent on the taxable portion of a $50,000 estate to 67.3 on $100,000,000 estates. The present $40,000 gift exemption and $40,000 estate exemption would be consolidated into one $40,000 exemption for both gifts and estates. The present $5,000 a year individual gift exemption from tax was lowered to $3,000. And the present $40,000 exemption for insurance money was not changed.

Changes Explained.

Explaining the changes in exemptions, Representative Vinson said:

"We have consolidated the $40,000 gift and $40,000 estate exemptions so that when $40,000 is reached in respect to either gift or estate tax, or both, there will be no more exemption.

"For example, if a person in his lifetime used up $20,000 of his gift tax exemption, that amount would be deducted from his $40,000 estate tax exemption. If he used up all of his gift tax exemption, he would have no estate tax exemption."

Schedule Rearranged.

Vinson said the schedule of estate taxes was rearranged "to help the taxpayer by giving a true picture to the public of what the real rate is."

As announced by Vinson, following is the proposed new schedule of effective tax rates on estates, before exemptions;

Effective rate.	Estate.
.4 per cent	$50,000
1.7 per cent	70,000
4.2 per cent	100,000
9.9 per cent	200,000
14.7 per cent	400,000
17.2 per cent	600,000
19.3 per cent	800,000
21.9 per cent	1,000,000
67.3 per cent	100,000,000

Under the schedules in the present law, which hit with approximately the same force, estate taxes start at 2 per cent on the first $10,000 of a taxable estate (or on the portion over the $40,000 exemption). The present rates range upward to 70 per cent on estates in excess of $50,000,000. The existing gift tax is three-quarters of the estates tax and would remain unchanged. The new schedule seeks to interpret the rates in terms of the total estate, the sub-committee said, adding that the changes would leave the "average" taxpayer unaffected.

Politics and People

Extreme New Dealers Wishfully Think Present Roosevelt Trend Temporary.

By Franklyn Waltman

THERE seems to be a widespread belief among ardent New Dealers and left-wingers around Washington that President Roosevelt at heart is the same man he was in the summer of 1933 and for several years thereafter and that the present Administration swing away from reckless experimentation will be only of temporary duration.

WALTMAN.

Summarized, their view appears to be that in the character of the football quarterback—to which Mr. Roosevelt has compared himself—the President has found it necessary to shift his attack somewhat, but that once business gets on its feet, he will revert to the now seemingly discarded scheme of planned economy which marked his first term.

If business does not regain its feet, these New Dealers assert in essence, it will be proof conclusive that private enterprise has lost its ability to function successfully and that restrictive measures to bring about a planned economy under the aegis of the Government are necessary. Indeed, some appear to argue that Mr. Roosevelt has shifted his course in this hour of recession only to gather evidence of the impotency of private enterprise with which to justify his future proposals for industrial discipline.

* * * *

These New Dealers may be right. Some of them claim to know Mr. Roosevelt well and to understand his behavior patterns. Patently, Mr. Roosevelt has demonstrated that he can shift and re-shift his course without embarrassment and he has been known to go hell-bent in two opposite directions at the same time.

Nevertheless, I believe that such contentions represent either wishful thinking or an incomplete understanding of the full implications of several of Mr. Roosevelt's recent utterances. I do not believe that Mr. Roosevelt has abandoned entirely his fondness for schemes based on Utopian planned economy—but I think he is headed by steps not so slow away from such undertakings and in a more determined fashion than he previously has shown.

Even if Mr. Roosevelt wished to revert to an advocacy of his first term theses—which is held here to be doubtful—he would make little progress for several reasons. One is that the country is better aware of the fallacies of such undertakings as NRA, AAA and the monetary experiments than it was four years ago.

Another reason is that Congress is in an entirely different mood. The extreme difficulties which have attended the wages and hours bill through Congress demonstrated this fact—and this measure is a great retreat from the original NRA. Still another factor is that Mr. Roosevelt is confronted by vastly different economic conditions now than he was over the last four years.

* * *

But it is doubtful whether Mr. Roosevelt wishes to revert to his first-term form. Surely his philosophy in the last year has undergone substantial revisions. But the most impressive evidence he will not backslide is that the character of his advisers has greatly changed—and that, after all, is the key to his course.

Mr. Roosevelt has no deep-seated political philosophy. Prior to the spring of 1933 he was a liberal Democrat, assailing the centralization of government in Washington; damning the regimentation of men by the Government as well as by financial and industrial oligarchies; advocating a more competitive free enterprise; defending local self-government; preaching lower tariffs and governmental economy and lauding the financial wisdom and conservatism of Senator Carter Glass.

Then came the enchanting Rexford Tugwell, the amateurish Tommy Corcoran, the inexplicable Raymond Moley, the reckless and volatile Hugh S. Johnson, the poultry expert, Prof. George Warren; the starry-eyed Frances Perkins and Harry Hopkins; the Keynes-inspired, impressionable Marriner S. Eccles; the gentleman farmer, Henry Morgenthau; the vapid Herman Oliphant, the ambitious, pious Henry Wallace; the socialistic David Lilienthal, theoretical ("logarithms") Mordecai Ezekiel, and a host of similar experimenters and soldiers of political fortune.

They overwhelmed Mr. Roosevelt. They worked together, approving each other's schemes in exchange for having their own way. They silenced the voices of experienced men in the Administration and caused some sensible men to doubt their own instincts. Radical though Mr. Roosevelt is not, he is reckless and he loves adventure. With a whoop he espoused many of the things he previously had condemned—and he talked a great deal of nonsense and black reaction, but made it sound like sense and liberalism.

* * *

But Mr. Roosevelt learned—and in recent months he has shunned many of his boon companions of former days. Instead of a Tugwell whispering the necessity for planned economy into the President's ear, we have Robert H. Jackson pointing out to Mr. Roosevelt the urgency of increasing competitive free enterprise through a frontal attack on monopoly in all its forms. Instead of a Herman Oliphant formulating Treasury policy, we have the ably orthodox economist, Winfield Riefler. Instead of pump-priming we have a determined effort to balance the budget.

Instead of the President asserting, as he did in New York on April 25, 1936, that "reduction of costs of manufacture does not mean more purchasing power and more goods consumed—it means just the opposite," we hear Mr. Roosevelt during the week tell Congress that "in the budget of the great mass of our families, the point is quickly reached where increased costs mean reduced consumption" and that "reduced consumption, in turn, means a decline in someone's business and someone's employment."

The implications and significance of those words are so great and at such variance with the Roosevelt policy of yester-year that it seems a safe prediction to say that the President soon will lose whatever enthusiasm he has left—and already he apparently has grave misgivings—for the wages-and-hours bill (particularly the hours part) and compulsory crop control.

It is too much to expect that Mr. Roosevelt suddenly would repudiate those measures, previously recommended by him. Nor is it fair to expect him to beat his head in public penance for his backsliding from true liberalism. In time he will reach that point, unless the present signs are false prophets. They appear genuine.

Improve Radio Programs, Says F. C. C. Member

Average Is Addressed to Mind of 12-Year-Old, Declares Payne.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 1.—A blunt notice that the standards of radio programs must be improved—by law, if necessary—was served upon the nation's broadcasters today by Federal Communications Commissioner George Henry Payne.

Contending the ether waves were the inalienable property of the public, he told the National Conference on Educational Broadcasting:

"The ideals of the broadcasters must be changed, even if such changes are made at the risk of a severe jolt to these gentlemen. Like the moving pictures, the average program of the broadcasters is addressed to an intelligence possessed by a child of 12. It is important to raise this average to the adult age; otherwise there is the danger that radio will perpetuate mental immaturity in the grown-up.

"There is the danger that radio and the movies will in time make us a nation of grown-up children. Radio must be prevented from stopping the growth of the American mind."

The program standard, he asserted, must be elevated to a plane corresponding with the industry's technical standard. He added:

"I hope * * * this can be done by the Federal Communications Commission under existing law. If it cannot, then further legislation may be necessary."

Expressing the hope minorities had not "lost all privileges and rights," he professed to see no reason why education by radio could not be made more interesting than teaching in schools.

Vandenberg Feels 'for President' Clubs Threaten to Put Him in 'False Position.'

VANDENBERG - FOR - PRESIDENT clubs failed yesterday to arouse enthusiasm on the part of Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan. Questioned concerning a telegram, which the Associated Press reported from Kansas City he had sent friends there, Vandenberg said the wire speaks for itself. The wire said, in part:

"I am not a candidate and should not be put in a false position. Honestly feel that the Republican Party should be kept impersonal so as to avoid needless friction while we are rebuilding to victory."

DEBONAIR SENATOR Ashurst (Democrat), of Arizona, who led President Roosevelt's unsuccessful fight to revamp the Supreme Court, told reporters he has scant hope of being appointed to the Supreme Court:

"No President would ever so far forget himself that he would appoint me to the court," said Ashurst.

"And if one did, I would never live to take my place on the bench—" he paused for effect—"because I would die of surprise."

A RESOLUTION by Senator King (Democrat), Utah, asked that the Senate set up a special three-man committee "to make a full and complete investigation of the Bituminous Coal Commission."

There have been allegations, the resolution said, that "controversies and contentions" among commission members have prevented the body from functioning properly and have operated to the injury of the coal industry and the public.

The inquiry would be designed to show:

"The number of employes * * * employed without regard to the civil service laws, whether any appointments have been made in violation of the civil service laws, * * * the methods and means, if any, used to circumvent the provisions of the civil service laws * * * and whether there has been any misconduct or incompetence on the part of the commissioners."

SENATORS WERE chided by Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, for inattention to his suggestions for a "stabilized dollar."

Fewer than a dozen Senators remained at their desks when the Oklahoman concluded a lengthy speech urging Congress to exercise powers over the "value of our dollar."

"Here we are 150 years old and supposed to be an intelligent Nation, with intelligent Congressmen and Senators," the white-haired Senator said, pointing to empty chairs about him.

"Yet, we won't even sit and listen to anything on this most vital issue."

'Cactus Jack' Snares the Buck While Confreres Get a Lemon

By the Associated Press.

St. Marys, Pa., Dec. 1.—Vice President John N. Garner tramped into a senatorial hunting camp today with a 125-pound 4-point buck slung over his shoulder.

"This is the way I take 'em in. I just wanted to show you I could carry it," he explained to the accompaniment of cheers and congratulations offered by other members of the Washington entourage crowded around Col. William Kaul's hunting lodge.

Mrs. Kaul hung a cardboard gold star suspended by a red ribbon around the Vice President's neck.

The hostess of the 10,000-acre estate in this picturesque northern Pennsylvania woodland turned to Senators Guffey, of Pennsylvania; Murray, of Montana, and Truman, of Missouri, all Democrats, who had fired at deer—and allegedly missed—and presented them with lemons tied to a string.

However, guides later found a 4-point 145-pound buck slain by Senator Guffey earlier in the day.

Guffey gave Garner a gun "on behalf of the visiting firemen and Dr. Hobbs (L. L. Hobbs, of Ridgeway, Pa.) for your fine shot this morning."

Girl, 14, Recites In Court to Aid Jailed Father

Proves She Knows Lessons Though Kept From School in Test Case.

By the United Press.

Philadelphia, Dec. 1.—A 14-year-old Amish schoolgirl—"Rebecca of Honeybrook Farm"—recited her lessons for Federal Judge George A. Welsh and attorneys today in a United States district courtroom, converted temporarily into a "little red schoolhouse."

The somber-clad girl in the Amish bonnet was Rebecca King, of Honeybrook, Pa., whose father, Aaron, was sent to jail in default of a $2 fine when he refused to send her to the new Honeybrook Consolidated School.

Pennsylvania law says that Rebecca must continue in school until she is 16, but her father says she is needed to work on the farm and that she would be exposed to worldly influences at the new school.

Counsel for her father is seeking a writ of habeas corpus and a Federal test of the constitutionality of the State law on religious ground.

Truman Wade, attorney for the school board, which is contesting the action, was the "teacher" today and asked the first question.

"How many justices are there on the United States Supreme Court?" he asked.

"Perhaps," Judge Walsh interposed, "we had better get one of the school directors to answer these questions for us because there seems to be some doubt about the correct answers."

"If I sold a horse for $230 and gained a 15 per cent profit," Wade then asked, "How much did I gain?"

The shy, rosy-cheeked Rebecca figured with a pencil and paper for a moment and then announced: "$245."

"That's right," Judge Walsh exclaimed.

"Oh, no, it isn't," Wade corrected, and Rebecca tried again, unsuccessfully.

But she knew how to raise turkeys, make apple cider, care for steers, the price of corn and other farm products. She also knew who invented the cotton gin, the harvesting machine, the steam engine and the radio and who discovered electricity.

The Bible, she said, was the greatest book she ever read and Washington, Lincoln and Jefferson were the greatest Presidents. These questions were asked by John N. Landberg, her father's attorney.

Judge Welsh asked attorneys for King and the school board to file additional briefs so that he may determine whether he had jurisdiction in the case before making a decision.

Wife Asks Divorce From Stokowski, Charging Cruelty

Las Vegas, Nev., Dec. 1 (AP).—Evangeline Stokowski today filed suit for divorce from Leopold Stokowski, leader of the Philadelphia Symphonic Orchestra. She charged extreme mental cruelty. Counsel for her husband immediately filed a waiver and stipulation denying the accusation.

Mrs. Stokowski said they were married in New York January 6, 1926, and that they have two minor children. The complaint also stated a property settlement was signed October 8. Hearing is set for tomorrow.

Stokowski was divorced in 1923 from Olga Samaroff, his first wife.

Only 8 Names Needed to Act On Wage Bill

Bankhead, Mrs. Norton Predict Success Today; Foes Charge 'Deals.'

Pope (Democrat), Idaho, and McGill (Democrat), Kansas, Wallace said the Senate measure is "more restrictive than necessary" and, in addition, might add heavily to the price of the present $500,000,000 soil conservation program. Wallace said he feared too frequent use of restrictive marketing quotas under the Senate bill would hurt export markets by forcing the American price out of line. It was his view that quotas should only be imposed when "the ever-normal granary was running over."

The House Agriculture Committee, meantime, proposed two further modifying changes in its own bill. One of the proposed changes would exempt from marketing quotas and acreage restrictions small cotton farmers who produce not more than 1,500 pounds of cotton lint. Another would apply a secrecy rule to crop control referenda among farmers.

Representative E. E. Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, Rules Committee opponent of the wages bill, insisted that a "flank movement against the petition would start today. He said he knew of some members who will remove their names.

If the required 218 members sign the petition this week the wages and hours bill would come before the House on the next "discharge Monday," December 13. But the petition must lie on the table seven legislative days before that date. So if the petition is not fully signed until Saturday, the House would have to meet every day next week except Sunday to comply with the rule.

Charges the House farm bill was being made "a purely log-rolling proposition" to get signatures on the wages-and-hours petition were openly made in the House by Representative A. Willis Robertson (Democrat), of Virginia. He spoke of efforts to "trade support for the farm measure in return for support for wage-and-hour measure."

"Reprisals are openly threatened," said Robertson, "if Southern members who conscientiously believe that the pending wage-and-hour bill is fundamentally unsound and inherently unworkable do not promptly march to the clerk's desk and sign the petition to bring up the wage-and-hour measure."

The wage petition parade coincided with a call by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, to members of his executive council. Green, who has urged rewriting the wages bill, asked councilmen to meet here December 3 to propose changes.

"Minimum rates of pay and maximum hours which the council believes should be incorporated in wages and hours legislation will be drafted and recommended to Congress for favorable consideration and action, said Green. "Methods of enforcement of said minimum and maximum requirements, together with the administration of a wages and hours act, will be formulated in recommendations."

A Republican and frequent critic of the New Deal, Representative Charles L. Gifford, of Massachusetts, was among petition signers yesterday. Assistant Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin said some other Republicans may sign, but "many are like myself. I want a wage-hour bill, but not this one."

The following Democrats signed yesterday: Representatives Johnson, Texas; Green, Hendricks and Peterson, of Florida; Massingale, Cartwright and Ferguson, of Oklahoma; Kenney and Towey, of New Jersey; Schaefer, of Illinois; Crowe and Farley, of Indiana; Romjue, of Missouri; Secrest, of Ohio, and McGroarty, of California. Representative Havenner, California Progressive, also signed.

Boland, whose closely-knit whip organization has been called into play to "put over" the petition, declared members were signing "in protest against the Rules Committee failure to act." But he admitted "some significance" could be given to laborite demands for farm support in return for "going along" on the farm bill.

With a show-down impending on wages-and-hours legislation in the House, and Senate farm debate running on without limit, the remaining special session program was still clouded with uncertainty. It was learned Senate leaders had considered possibility of seldom-invoked "cloture" to limit debate on the next order of business—anti-lynching legislation. The proposal was abandoned when it was indicated it could not get the required number of votes.

Rail Leaders Fear Credit Loss and Insolvency If I. C. C. Denies Application for Rate Increase effect in 1938, it would have cost us approximately $32,650,000 in excess of the former cost."

Gross $2,000,000,000.

He had just stated the facts of the road's position at the end of the past fiscal year, with total operating revenues of $376,000,000, total operating expenses of $278,000,000, taxes of nearly $35,000,000, with net railway operating income, after other deductions, standing at $48,000,000, or a return of 2.31 per cent on an investment of more than $2,000,000,000. After payment of fixed charges, net income was $15,000,000.

He continued: "The situation is such that the New York Central, like other carriers, must have an immediate correction in the spread between income and outgo if it is to continue to give the character of service to which the shipping and traveling public is entitled and long accustomed.

"The company has not the reserve power to sustain itself that it had at the end of 1929, or even at the end of 1930, which at the time we all thought to be rather a poor year."

Williamson declared reductions in expenses, through cutting down employment and curtailing operations, or even by diminished taxes, could not "within reason" assure the railroads of a wider margin between expenditures and revenues.

New Valuations Ready.

Scandrett, discussing the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul & Pacific, gave a striking illustration of the need for increased revenues, saying:

"The Interstate Commerce Commission's valuation of the property subject to a first lien (general mortgage bonds on the heart of the Milwaukee system) brought down to 1935, is $468,600,000, or over three times the amount of the total authorized issue of $150,000,000 general mortgage bonds. A few years ago these bonds were regarded as gilt-edge security. Today they are selling at less than 30 cents on the dollar, reflecting the public's opinion that this first mortgage of $150,000,000 on property with a valuation of over $468,600,000, is not worth $45,000,000."

In this connection, Commissioner Clyde B. Aitchison, presiding, announced yesterday new valuations for major railroads would be disclosed at the hearings. No announcement of regional hearings was made, although many shippers expect the commission to agree to regional sessions throughout the country about the middle of January.

Surplus Tax Attacked.

Bledsoe attacked the undistributed surplus profits tax:

"The imposition of a penalty of from 7 to 27 per cent upon the use of undistributed earnings for addition and betterment purposes imposes an unjustifiable burden upon any endeavor of railroad stockholders to supplement from funds otherwise payable to them, funds necessary for plant improvement."

Clement, noting that "the accumulation of deferred maintenance in rail and track is still over $40,000,000," declared after a brief review of the Pennsylvania's fiscal condition: "Any property that with a 33 1-3 per cent pickup in business, cannot save more than 12 cents on the dollar is not in a healthy condition. I hate to think what is before us next year, with expenses and revenues as they are today."

Clement expressed concern over size of the requested increase, remarking: "We have been trying for better rates for six years. We trust it is not too late and that the amount we have asked for is not too small."

Doubts 15 Per Cent Enough.

Turning to the proposed increase of Eastern district coach fares, from 2 cents per mile to 2½ cents, Clement said: "We would have made more money if the 2½ cent coach rate suggested by the railroads in 1935 had been established. We would have had practically as much volume under a 2½ cent coach fare as we had under the 2 cent fare." Discussing the railroad problem as a whole he said that "it isn't the service," and "it isn't labor relations."

The answer to the problem is "obvious," he said, adding: "They need additional revenue. Probably an increase even greater than that asked for by the railroads themselves is needed . . . The denial of the increase would mean disaster to so many railroads it seems difficult to exaggerate the consequences."

Donnelly said that "we have reached the point where further reductions in costs are out of the question, and "many railroads will never survive another major depression."

Revenue Cut One-fourth.

McCarthy said the narrowed margin between revenues and expenses has forced the Denver & Rio Grande Western into the courts, and the road's average revenue has fallen 27 per cent, with a 50 per cent drop in revenue per passenger mile.

Willard expressed the general view with a sigh as he said: "While we will end this year probbaly with a small surplus, it is a good thing that this year is not going to be any longer than it is."

He had stated that if the requested increases were granted, "I believe it will do more than any other single thing to promote recovery and reduce unemployment." He revealed doubt pasenger revenues will be increased by the proposed new coach travel rate, but said, "in any event it is fully justified in view of the increased cost of operation."

Willard said the Baltimore & Ohio had furloughed 10,000 regular employes since June 1 and that "we will be obliged to keep our forces on the present, or perhaps even lower, basis until the maladjustment between income and cost of operation now existing shall have been to some extent at least corrected."

44 Nazis, 2 Soviet Ship Crews Freed

Moscowfi Dec. 1 (AP).—Diplomatic sources today disclosed 44 German prisoners had been deported from Soviet Russia in virtual exchange for crews of two Soviet ships recently released in Spain.

These sources said the German Embassy "was not satisfied," however, as approximately 500 Germans are under arrest in the Soviet Union. They were among aliens caught in the drive against foreigners, most of them on spy and wrecking charges.

Report Rejects One-Man Rule Of Civil Service

Brookings Institution Is Opposed to Plan of Roosevelt.

before the commission and they should be settled by a deliberative body.

"3. The commission controls administrative officers in the vital matter of appointments and in some cases in the equally important matter of salaries. The administrative officers need protection against a possibly arbitrary, high-handed, single administrator.

Public Confidence Cited.

"4. The success of the merit system under our national law depends in large part upon public confidence and public support. Public confidence and public support would, it is believed, be diminished if there were only one civil service administrator."

Some of the "dangers" of a single administrator, as envisioned by the Brookings report, are:

1. The one-man administrator would be affiliated with, or be suspected of affiliation with one political party, and therefore be suspected of partisan bias.

2. He would be identified with one section of the country and consequently be suspected of having sectional interests or prejudices.

3. The advantage of having both sexes represented would be lost.

4. A single administrator either would be identified with one religious faith or no religious faith.

Political Pressure Feared.

5. A single administrator would be more easily swayed by anger, by enthusiasm or by political pressure.

"This pressure might come from the President himself," the report suggests, "from his Cabinet officers and other politically appointed higher administrators, or from members of Congress. A single administrator would be less able to resist it than a commission of three."

Discussing proposals for competitive examinations for promotions, the report said:

"Whether or not the administrators must be controlled to prevent favoritism in making selections for promotion is a debatable question.

"In many of the technical, scientific and professional bureaus of the National Government, the supervisors from close to the top down to the bottom are classified civil service employes who have gained their own positions by merit and they are as stanch supporters of the merit system as any Civil Service Commission has ever been.

Are Well Informed.

"They are, moreover, better informed regarding the subject matter of the work, the business practice and procedure, the organization, personnel and clientele of the agency than any civil service examiner can be."

The report states that a promotional examination system was once tried in the Patent Office and abandoned as impractical.

"The practice of the United States Civil Service Commission with respect to promotion examinations has reflected no small measure of practical horse sense," the investigator concludes.

"Control should not go further than is reasonably necessary to eliminate an evil, and the evil to be eliminated is patronage and spoils."

Culbertson Hopes Wife Will Return Home 'Some Day'

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—Ely Culbertson, bridge authority, whose wife has decided to get a Reno divorce and remain only his bridge partner, sailed for Europe today, saying "I'll be waiting for her any time she wants to come back."

"I hope some day she'll want to marry me again," he added.

"I told her," he said, "that I'll never marry any other woman; and she may find that the old devil is a little better than any new devil."

As an afterthought Culbertson said if he ever did marry another woman it would be "a spirited English woman who looked like Mrs. Culbertson."

2 Killed as Plane Falls in 'Combat'

Shreveport, La., Dec. 1 (AP).—An Army plane today plummeted to the ground during combat training near Avery, Tex., 50 miles west of Texarkana, Ark., killing its pilot and gunner.

The pilot, Second Lieut. Charles William Field, 23, of Rocky Face, Ga., was killed outright and the gunner, Private George W. Bolton, jr., 19, of Bienville Parish, La., died in a hospital in Texarkana.

Army officers, after questioning of two other planes engaged in the misison, said Field's plane went into a spin at 500 feet.

Haitian Hopes For Peace Soon With Neighbor

Foreign Minister Leger Confers With Welles on Dominican Rift.

By the Associated Press.

Haitian Foreign Minister Georges Leger yesterday said he hoped for a "peaceful settlement" of the controversy between his country and the Dominican Republic.

His statement followed a visit to Undersecretary Sumner Welles at the State Department.

Meanwhile, the Dominican Legation here made public a cabled message from President Rafael Trujillo, in which the latter voiced the hope the differences between the West Indies republics would be settled quickly."

"Solution Not Far Off."

Trujillo's message said the "solution of the present difficulties cannot be far off. In the highest interest of the two countries, it cannot but be a solution of justice and humanity."

Trujillo said his government was carrying out its pledge of October 15 to investigate a border incident, which occurred early that month and which led to the present friction.

Leger said that at least 5,000 Haitians had been killed in Dominican territory.

3,000 Slain, He Charges.

During a visit here November 9, Leger asserted that between 3,000 and 5,000 Haitians had been "massacred," many of them inside Dominican territory.

He said Haiti, after it recently asked the United States, Cuba and Mexico to offer their aid in projected mediation, had abandoned direct negotiations with the Dominican republic toward a settlement.

Leger added that Haiti would insist on "full raparations for the victims, and punishment of those responsible."

'What's in a Dress,' U. S. Film, Argues For Working Girls

To the lady of fashion, important things about each season's style are correct skirt length, position of the waist line and the patterns which have received sanction of Paris couturiers.

"What's in a Dress," motion picture just released by the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor, doesn't touch on any of these details. It deals with the thousands of women who never heard of Schiaparelli; whose sole interest in newest gowns is how much factories will pay them for making them.

HAPPY RELIEF FROM PAINFUL BACKACHE

Caused by Tired Kidneys

Many of those gnawing, nagging, painful backaches people blame on colds or strains are often caused by tired kidneys—and may be relieved when treated in the right way.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking excess acids and poisonous waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

If the 15 miles of kidney tubes and filters don't work well, poisonous waste matter stays in the blood. These poisons may start nagging backaches, rheumatic pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from the blood. Get Doan's Pills. Adv

Magic Shows For Lunch Fund To Be Repeated

Committee Hopes to Raise $7,000 in Program to Feed Needy.

"Magic Shows" staged in downtown Washington recently for the benefit of the school hot lunch fund will be revived in school auditoriums throughout the District, the Board of education decided yesterday on receipt of an appeal from Mrs. John Boyle, chairman of the Citizens' emergency committee "for the feeding of hungry school children."

Only about 5 per cent of the the school children attended the shows downtown, Mrs. Boyle pointed out. Many more would have gone to the programs that aided the hot lunch program, if the admission price hadn't been so "prohibitive," and transportation had been easier.

Mrs. Boyle said that "on December 15 our committee must pay to WPA officials some $12,000 to provide for the hot lunch program during January." Under her plan, she estimated that $7,000 could be raised.

The board gave unofficial approval to another project for raising hot lunch money. Members of the board said they could "see no objection" to a proposed football contest between the Monroe A. & M. School, of Monroe, Ga., and a team to be made up of players from local high schools.

Senator Arthur Capper of Kansas yesterday visited headquarters of the Citizens' Emergency Committee in the Mayflower and purchased a health bond being sold as part of the campaign.

A committee from the dramatic club of Roosevelt High School also turned in $75 raised for the fund from a drama presentation.

Contract

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson

Vision.

Good defense may be defined simply as the ability to recognize the specific tricks required to defeat a contract, and second, the modus operandi of securing those tricks. In the hand below a defender's problem was simplicity itself.

North, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	1 ♡	4 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

West opened the deuce of hearts; dummy ducked, and the Queen won. Now, without giving a great deal of thought to the situation, East made the dub play of laying down the heart Ace. Right then and there he conceded the contract. Declarer ruffed, led the King and Queen of spades, and then a diamond toward dummy. The nine lost to East's Queen, and now it did not matter what East returned. Declarer could claim the balance, after knocking out the diamond Ace, since there were three established diamonds in dummy on which to discard losing clubs.

East had erred badly at the second trick. His partner's lead was almost certainly the fourth highest; therefore, declarer was marked with a singleton. East could reasonably count on two diamond tricks. Therefore, in addition to the only heart trick available, he would need a club trick before dummy's diamonds were established for discards. The one hope of defeating the contract was to find West with the club King.

Drug Violation Laid to Woman By Grand Jury

Bertha Levy Is Indicted After Death of Wealthy Invalid.

Charged with violating the Harrison narcotic act, Bertha Levy, 43, of New York, was indicted by the District grand jury yesterday after an investigation allegedly disclosed she had sold a quantity of contraband narcotics to a nurse in a Washington hotel.

Arrest of Mrs. Levy followed an autopsy on a wealthy invalid which disclosed he had died of narcotic poisoning rather than the malignant growth from which he suffered. It was learned he had been obtaining narcotics in $1,600 lots from New York. The nurse agreed to cooperate with the agents, but their trap almost collapsed when Mrs. Levy, her suspicions aroused, refused to deliver a package to an Alexandria hotel, where an undercover agent was posing as a bedridden invalid, officials explained. Later she delivered a consignment to a hotel, they declared.

Policeman Hunted.

Jeff Henry, member of the Metropolitan Police Department, and Edna Gray, colored, were indicted on a charge of performing an illegal operation on a young girl. Henry, now being sought, is said to have arranged for the operation, which took place several months ago. The patient survived.

In another indictment, the grand jury charged Martin Ainsworth, 34, with assault with a weapon and with intent to kill. He is said to have attacked his wife, Mrs. Lotie R. Ainsworth, with a hatchet, and with slashing his mother-in-law, Mrs. Rachel E. Bean.

A first degree murder indictment was placed against Cleo Hinton, colored, in the slaying of William Harris, also colored, at Fourteenth and Riggs streets northwest, last summer. Hinton has not been apprehended.

Arrested by Federal agents within a few seconds of the alleged sale, Mrs. Levy was searched and $1,170 in marked money given to the nurse to pay for the shipment was found on her.

In another indictment, Charles Torre, 46, said by the police to be the brother-in-law of Tony (The Stinger) Cugino, who committed suicide in a New York City jail several months ago, was accused of bribery. He is said to have given $30 to a policeman for "protection" for an establishment on Thirteenth street northwest.

List of Those Indicted.

Those indicted were:

Alfred Penn, Johnnie Brown, Philip T. Long, Richard Carrick, Leon Bolden, William Kendrick, James B. Butler, Jesse Blue, James Davis, Clyde Talley, John E. Gupton, Charles Hopper and Joseph E. Gray, housebreaking; Raymond Bateman and John Mitchell, grand larceny; James M. Striplin, larceny from the United States; Edward J. A. Vaughn, Nathaniel Milliner, Leroy M. Johnson and Martin Ainsworth, assault with a dangerous weapon; Ernest Hawkins, rape; Clarence Precia, rape and assault with intent to commit rape; Edward D. Cantor, assault with intent to commit rape.

Code; John Garner, Walter Tate and Leslie L. England, violation of section 265, Title 18, U. S. Code; James Johnson, Melvin C. Lilyons, and George W. D.C. Sanitary Code To Be Modernized

The District's sanitary code, in effect since 1878, is being revised, officials of the Health Department disclosed yesterday.

Since the day of adoption, the code, termed "ancient" by health authorities, has had few changes. Far behind other cities and States, the sanitary code will be brought to date with latest developments, as suggested by the American Public Health Association, officials said.

The Health Department said the recodification would be based on existent sanitary codes of the States of New York, Kansas, Washington, Connecticut and Minnesota, States which are considered progressive in preparing their codes.

Regulation of common towels, drinking cups, stagnant water, keeping of animals, and so on, are included in the sanitary codes.

Playgrounds to Open Santa Claus Gift Shop

The Santa Claus shop of the District Playgrounds will open its doors Monday at 1637 Massachusetts avenue, Sybil Baker, supervisor of playgrounds, announced yesterday.

Toys, playthings, games, and any gift will be accepted by the shop, Miss Baker said, and will be repainted or repaired if necessary. Each year the playground department, in co-operation with the Christmas exchange committee of the Council of Social Agencies, distributes thousands of toys to the children of needy families in the District.

URIC ACID?

Excess uric acid causes much suffering—from rheumatic pains, stiff joints, gout, etc. If you suffer from any of these your doctor may have said that the caffeine in coffee is likely to aggravate your trouble.

But "no caffeine" doesn't mean "no coffee." You can enjoy coffee as zestful as any you ever used, if you change to Kaffee-Hag Coffee. Kaffee-Hag is real coffee, all coffee, fine coffee, 97% caffeine-free. Roasted by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Artificial Siamese Twins Made In Treating Scarred Girl Here

D. C. Boy to Be Joined to Burning Victim for Five Weeks.

was able to walk again, both arms were pinioned to the sides by scar tissue and her chin glued, to all appearances, to her neck.

A few months ago the child was brought to Washington and her case came to the attention of Emergency Hospital and Dr. Robert E. Moran, plastic surgeon. It was apparent, even to a layman, that the horribly disfigured child had been too extensively burned to have any of her own skin, say from a thigh or calf, transferred to a part of the body needing it more.

"Twin" Was Hard to Find.

On the other hand, study of medical literature failed to reveal any precedent for a person-to-person graft by the tube pedicle method, which was indicated in this case. Under this technique, the donor would submit a quantity of his flesh being slit, being rolled in a tube and then, finally, attached to the patient, with the two persons having a single circulatory system during their Siamese-twin union.

That is what John and Clara, a couple of young colored people who scarcely know each other, are heading for. Clara, who lives with her aunt at 2221 L street northwest, already has had her left arm freed by Dr. Moran's surgery. When the time comes, the right arm will be cut free and John's pound and a half of flesh—that's going Shylock 50 per cent better—distributed over her side, chest, neck and below the armpit.

Finding Clara's "twin" was a discouraging task. Because she and her benefactor would have to share the some blood stream during the interval of union, it was imperative ot find a donor with the same blood grouping as hers. Clara's brother was brought here from North Carolina for tests, but he was found unsuitable.

Lessons Brought Home.

Then along came John, a relative of the girl but who had seen her only once before when he made a trip to North Carolina. He volunteered gladly, his only inquiry having to do with the possible peril which the series of operations might exert upon his chances of graduating from Shaw in February.

John is not worrying about that now, because his teachers are bringing him his lessons at home and they have assured him that he won't miss the February graduating class.

His mother, of course, is right anxious about her son, besides being downright disappointed that she won't be able to keep a promise she made to him. It wasn't that the lad needed a coaxer, but his mother said she would reward him with $20 and a new coat. Then, just the other day, she went and got sick—she is the sole support of a large family, taking in roomers and doing outside work—and the $20 had to go for doctor's bills.

JOHN MELVIN BONNER.

Will Have Deep Scar.

"Aw, that's all right, mom," John reassured his mother yesterday.

Before he becomes the right member of a pair of synthetic Siamese twins, young Bonner must undergo an operation to separate his flesh from his left side. This will be done in a week or two and then, for several weeks longer, he will go about with a rope of flesh extending from his armpit to his waist, joined to the body at both ends, but free to be grasped.

At the proper time, when it is certain that blood circulation through the tube is good, the joining will be consummated. This twin stage must last for several weeks, long enough for circulation to become normal, otherwise the operation would be doomed to failure.

When the boy and girl are "divorced" by surgery, John's wound is expected to heal promptly, though he will always bear a deep scar where the flesh was removed. As for Clara, work on her will be just beginning. Several months will be required to "sculpt" the new skin on her body.

Meanwhile, John—he hopes—will be continuing his studies to become a "a doctor or an electrical engineer, I'm not sure yet which."

Ease Crop Controls to Let Granary Overflow, He Advises.

program proposed would range from $100,000,000 to more than $300,000,000 more than the $500,000,000 now being spent under the soil conservation act, and recommended processing taxes on cotton and wheat.

Wallace suggested the bill be written so farmers would know whether subsidies, in addition to soil conservation payments, would be available.

Cotton Move Criticized.

Wallace criticized a provision of the Senate bill pertaining to the price adjustment payment of 3 cents a pound on 1937 cotton authorized by the last Congress. He said the measure would remove a condition that producers who received such payments must comply with the 1938 cotton adjustment program.

Wallace also suggested commodity loan provisions of the bill provide for loans of 55 per cent of parity price instead of 85 per cent for wheat and cotton. He said that if the loan rates were excessively high, prices of these products might be raised out of line with world prices, causing further losses in export markets.

"It has been my thought," Wallace added, "that marketing quotas should not be used unless and until the ever-normal granary was running over, and then only if approved by a two-thirds vote in referendum."

Fears Price Level.

The Secretary urged changes that would permit larger production of cotton without use of marketing quotas.

"In the case of cotton," he wrote, "marketing quotas would be used under the bill as now drawn to restrict the annual supply to a quantity which would hold the American price out of line with the world price level."

He reiterated his belief the new farm program should provide a "tariff equalizing tax," levied on processors, to supplement income of wheat, cotton and possibly rice growers. As yet no step has been taken in Congress to provide such a tax.

Senator Pope interpreted Wallace's letter as in "general support" of the pending bill and said this was "encouraging."

"I always have believed," the Idahoan said, "that we must iron out some differences on the floor of the Senate and then whip the bill into shape in a conference with the House."

Senator McGill joined Pope in an informal statement that the letter was "very friendly," and both dismissed any idea that it might "retard or jeopardize" the legislation. The Kansan took issue with Wallace on size of surpluses requiring marketing quotas.

"The bigger the supply," he said, "the more money it will take to handle it. It seems to me the Secretary's plan would add to the cost of the program."

TAKE WEIGHT OFF TIRED FEET

Lose Fat The Easy Way—Without Starvation Diets, or Back-Breaking, Banting and Rolling Exercises.

If your feet and ankles feel tired and ache all over — because you are carrying too much fat — do something about it. Try the treatment that has helped millions to reduce excess weight.

There's a reason why so many people find dieting slow and often times futile in reducing. The reason, doctors say, is often because a little gland is not working right.

All the blood in your body goes through this tiny gland sixteen times every day. If it doesn't pour into the blood stream about one and one-half drops of vital fluid every 24 hours, many people take on ugly fat. This fluid helps Nature to "burn up" excess food and fatty tissue in much the same way as a good "draft" acts in a furnace.

Now, physicians combat their conditions by feeding this gland the substance it lacks — and millions of pounds of excess fat has been wiped out in this way.

Marmola Prescription Tablets are based on the same method used by doctors. So don't waste your time or money starving to reduce with starvation diets or back-breaking exercises. Start the Marmola treatment today that millions have used successfully to get rid of excess fat. The formula is in every box so you know exactly what you are taking. Don't wait — get a box of Marmola today from your druggist. Adv.

Ross Contends Davidson Slain In Self-Defense

'Confession' Ruled Out of Opening Statement in Murder Trial.

By Edward F. Ryan,
A Staff Correspondent.

Stafford Court House, Va., Dec. 1.—Winner in the first skirmish in the trial of Walter L. Ross, 17-year-old former Marine, for the murder of Elmer J. Davidson, 52, United States Chamber of Commerce official, the defense today moved ahead to establish self-defense as a motive.

Frank P. Moncure, defense attorney, told the court he would be required to present evidence "unusual, disgusting and repulsive to the public mind."

Confession Ruled Out of Speech.

Previously he had won a legal encounter when he asked Judge Frederick W. Coleman to excuse the jury and then moved that no reference to any alleged confession by Ross be allowed in the opening address to the jury by Prosecuting Attorney W. W. Butzner. His motion was granted over Butzner's objection.

From questioning the legality of confessions Ross might have made, Moncure moved to establish self-defense as the motive for the slaying. He told the jury he intended to prove Davidson was killed after he made improper advances to his slender young client.

A packed courtroom heard Virginia State Trooper A. L. Robertson testify that Ross told him he stabbed Davidson and a moment later shot the elderly attorney as he lay on the ground. Robertson said he heard the confession while he drove Ross from Quantico to Alexandria after the youth's release by Marine Corps authorities.

Moncure twice charged that confessions obtained from Ross were made involuntarily. After Robertson's testimony the court adjourned until 9 a. m. tomorrow.

Flight Is Described.

Through the testimony of a dozen witnesses, Ross sat quietly. Between his attorneys, Moncure and C. W. Shaw. The youth rarely changed his position, but he held his hands gripped together and frowned slightly.

Without change of expression, Ross heard Prosecutor Butzner tell that Davidson was "cruelly and mercilessly murdered." Butzner, assisting Commonwealth Attorney Gus B. Wallace, described the alleged movements of Ross after the murder, his wrecking Davidson's car at Triangle, Va., and hitch-hiking to Frederick, Md., and his home in Aberdeen.

Edward Antel and Curtis Abel, who saw Davidson's car wrecked at Triangle and talked with its driver, said they could not identify Ross as the driver. Paul Tyson, of Gardeners, Pa., driver of the Pennsylvania car which carried a slaying suspect to Frederick, Md., testified he could not identify Ross positively.

First witness called to the stand was Liston Dickerson, of Widewater, who discovered Davidson's body the morning of October 4. He was followed by Miss Louise Jenkins, who was with Dickerson at the discovery; State Troopers E. C. Trice and Maury G. Sneed, first officers at the scene, described how Davidson was found with a bullet wound through his left temple, and a stab wound in his chest.

Either Wound Fatal.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald of Washiongton, testified to his findings in the second autopsy on Davidson's body, held a month after his death. He said that the knife wound in Davidson's chest had penetrated the lower chamber of the heart, causing a hemorrhage. The bullet he testified, had taken a downward course from the left temple to the base of the brain. Either wound, he said, could have caused death.

Roosevelt Yacht Radios Fishing Luck Is Excellent

Miami, Dec. 1 (AP).—President Roosevelt and his vacation party spent a second day in the Dry Tortugas area today fishing off Garden Key.

A radio message from the yacht Potomac said he was enjoying excellent luck, but gave no details of the catch or whether he had overtaken Harry L. Hopkins, relief administrator, who was the leading fisherman of the party at the last report.

Saying Where 'Cop' Can Go Held Mere Statement of Fact

New York, Dec. 1 (U.P.).—It is o. k. to tell a traffic cop where he can go, Magistrate Mark Rudich ruled today in dismissing disorderly conduct charge against Miss Margaret Greenberg.

The traffic cop—Fred Schweyer—complained that when he admonished Miss Greenberg for blowing her automobile horn unnecessarily, she told him, in an annoyed tone, "You can go to hell."

"That is a simon-pure declaration of fact," the magistrate decided.

Italy Seeks 10% Boost In Naval Budget for '38

Rome, Dec. 1 (AP).—The Chamber of Deputies was asked tonight to approve a 10 per cent increase in Italy's 1937-38 naval budget to finance new construction. The additional expenditures would bring the naval budget to more than $100,000,000.

Budget Report On Philippines Shows Surplus

Woodring Pictures Islands as One of Most Prosperous Nations in World.

The Philippine Commonwealth was pictured yesterday by Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring as one of the world's most prosperous governments.

The Far Eastern ward of the United States not only balanced its budget last year but had a surplus of $3,970,214, representing nearly 10 per cent of its annual expenditures, he said in his annual report on the War Department's Bureau of Insular Affairs.

Noting that the Philippines' financial condition was "excellent," Secretary Woodring pointed out that the trade volume and the favorable balance increased, gold production mounted, and the small public debt was further reduced.

The Islands' fiscal outlook in the immediate future is even brighter. Dealing only with the 12 months ended June 30, Woodring omitted mention of a coconut oil tax refund of approximately $47,000,000 made by the United States in July—enough to run the entire Commonwealth Government for a full year.

Under existing Congressional legislation, furthermore, the Philippines will collect from the United States Treasury for several years to come annual refunds of about $18,000,000 of coconut oil taxes and $10,000,000 of sugar excise taxes.

Together the two prospective sources of income would go far toward meeting all expenses of the semi-autonomous Commonwealth.

Total expenditures in 1936 were $46,183,006.

He noted that in the last fiscal year the United States furnished 60.81 per cent and Japan 13.12 per cent of Philippine imports, while 78.8 per cent of insular exports came to this country and only 5.68 per cent went to nearby Japan.

Under the Tydings McDuffie independence act, the 13,000,000 Filipinos are to be given complete freedom in 1946. In the meantime High Commissioner Paul V. McNutt exercises a general supervision over the Philippine government.

Post School Editor Writes Story of Sixty Years of Educational News in The Post

On December 12, 1877, two of the most important stories in the little, four-page Post of those days concerned education. Sixty years ago there was no thought of keeping editorial bias out of the news columns and headlines. It was probably the editor himself who wrote the headline on the story reproduced above, and his headline tells exactly how The Post felt about free education 60 years ago—"The Real Interest Of The Nation!"

With this early indication as a start, Jay Walz has written the story of education in Washington as mirrored in the sympathetic columns of The Post for 60 years. This is just one of the many fine articles you will enjoy in the Sixtieth Anniversary Edition of The Washington Post. Phone National 4200 to reserve your copy.

Tackett's Plea To Creech for Cash Related

Defense Produces Note Linked to Chief Witness in Perjury Trial.

Counsel for Ted Creech, Kentucky mine boss, on trial for perjury, charged yesterday that Richard C. Tackett, prosecution witness, lied to the La Follette Civil Liberties Committee last April and offered to clear Creech for $600.

Defense Counsel William E. Leahy read to the jury a note to Creech which George Lee Harlan, deputy sheriff, said was signed by Tackett. In the note Tackett agreed to change his testimony if he was given $600 and "turned loose from jail."

"I didn't know what I was talking about up at Washington," the note said. "I was the victim of dope. My mind was all confused.'

Confined in the Harlan jail last summer on a charge of shooting to kill, Tackett also asked Creech to "go his bail" for $2,500 and give him a job."

A statement purporting to be Tackett's "life story," written for publication in a New York newspaper, charged that Tackett was coached and drilled by Senate Committee attaches before he testified against Harlan coal operators.

The perjury charge against Creech is based on a reputed conversation with Tackett in a Senate Office Building corridor. Tackett told the committee he was threatened by Creech. The mine superintendent denied the threat and said Tacket admitted "being drunk and didn't know what he was talking about."

Circuit Judge James Gilbert, of Pineville, Ky., and other witnesses yesterday said Tackett's reputation for truth and veracity was "very bad."

The Creech case is expected to go to the jury late today.

The consistories are the first since June, 1936, due to illness of Pope Pius XI.

Chancey Attacks D. C. Tax Setup

Martin Chancey, city secretary of the Communist Party, yesterday attacked both the sales tax and the business privilege tax as methods of raising additional revenue in Washington. He declared the Communists favored "a graduated income tax which would place the burden where it properly belongs—on the shoulders of those who make the money, on the bankers, large property owners, corporations—in short, on the rich."

The sales tax, asserted Chancey, placed the burden of maintaining the Government and providing for the needy upon that portion of the population least able to bear it. The business privilege tax, he stated, would be felt most heavily by the smaller business men who are carrying on a desperate struggle for existence.

Diver in New Type Of Suit Breaks Old Depth Mark 114 Ft.

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 1 (AP).—Observers aboard the Coast Guard cutter Antietam reported that Max E. Nohl, 27-year-old Milwaukee diver, had descended 420 feet into Lake Michigan in a new type diving suit today, and claimed he had broken all existing depth records.

The record for depth was credited to Frank Grilley of the United States Navy, with 306 feet.

Nohl breathed a mixture of helium and axygen.

Diver Nohl will attempt to explore the sunken liner, Lusitania, which lies 312 feet deep off the Irish coast, it was said here last night. But prior to that salvage venture, he and associates, including F. MacDonald Bryan, of 4511 Wilson boulevard, Arlington, Va., and Capt. John Craig, will undertake to salvage treasure from the S. S. Merida, Ward Line steamer sunk in 1911 off the Southern capes, laden with silver and jewelry refugees were bringing from Mexico.

Middle Income Gifts.

If energy and enthusiasm were dollars and cents, the Community Chest volunteer workers would have reached their $2,059,000 goal days ago. For two weeks, nearly 9,000 of them labored to raise the amount but failed; they gave themselves another week, just ended, and are still $227,000 short. Nothing daunted, many of them have now pledged themselves to continue the drive until the objective is won. Washington has never had a more inspiring example of civic responsibility faithfully dispatched.

Their zeal is explained largely by their knowledge that many fellow citizens will suffer unless the full $2,059,000 is raised. By contact with the Community Chest directors—men and women of unquestioned integrity and acumen drawn from the city's top business and professional ranks—workers in the drive have satisfied themselves that Washington's private relief machinery cannot function efficiently on a penny less. The situation this year is particularly urgent because of the reduction of Federal relief outlays.

To date, unfortunately, many Washingtonians have failed to appreciate this urgency. They have given—yes—but not enough. Nor can the wealthy class of the city be expected to make up the difference. Already this group has given and given again generously. It is the "middle givers" who must make up the $227,000. Here is the Chest's view of reasonable contributions from middle income brackets, making allowance always for exceptional cases:

Income.	Contribution.
Up to $900	.33%—$ 3
$ 900—$ 1,200	.50%—$ 6
$1,200—$ 2,000	.60%—$ 12
$2,000—$ 2,800	.75%—$ 21
$2,800—$ 3,600	1.00%—$ 36
$3,600—$ 5,000	1.25%—$ 63
$5,000—$ 7,000	2.00%—$140
$7,000—$10,000	3.00%—$300

A call to the Community Chest, listed as such in the telephone book, will bring a collector to those who may want to add to their first contribution.

Another Peace Overture.

The proposals of Wendell L. Willkie, president of the Commonwealth & Southern, for a satisfactory relationship between the private utilities and the Federal Government afford fresh evidence that a spirit of compromise is abroad in the land. We have been accustomed so long to acrimonious interchanges between representatives of the Government and the utilities, with each side trying to establish a case against the other, that the recent shift from controversy to constructive proposals is most encouraging.

Mr. Willkie sensibly says that the "greatest immediate requirement of the industry is a large inflow of common capital indispensable for much needed additional construction." Consequently his recommendations are designed to remove certain major uncertainties that have made investors unwilling to put new capital into the industry.

His first suggestion is that the utilities should at once eliminate from their capital structures "write-ups" in property value which have been ascribed to them by the Federal Trade Commission. That appears to be a reasonable suggestion clearing the way for acceptance of the principle of "prudent" investment as a basis for rate-making in the future. Provided the readjustment of capital values is not extreme, the clearing away of uncertainty regarding rate policies would tend to strengthen investors' confidence in the outlook for the utility industry.

The second cause of investor nervousness is the so-called "death sentence" clause of the public utility act. Again Mr. Willkie makes a recommendation that is worthy of serious consideration. He urges modification of this controversial section to permit elimination of all intermediate holding companies within three years, while otherwise confirming existing holding companies in their present ownership of property.

His third recommendation is for a much needed determination of policies to be followed by the TVA and other similar Federal projects in the distribution and sale of power. He would apply the same cost-accounting methods to public as to private utilities, in determining the prices to be charged for sales of power. And he also urges purchase of private distribution systems at a fair valuation as an alternative to construction of duplicate facilities by municipalities.

The fact that Mr. Willkie professes not to be entirely reconciled to making the concessions which he urges upon the industry is best evidence of the sincerity of his wish to find a solution of the major problems that urgently require attention. He has done an excellent service by summarizing the difficulties and providing a starting point for what should prove to be really fruitful discussions.

Regulation By Licensing.

The bill sponsored by Senators O'Mahoney and Borah providing for Federal licensing of corporations engaged in interstate commerce would put a formidable control weapon in the hands of the Federal regulatory authorities.

Senator O'Mahoney, who has been actively pushing legislation of this type for some time, attaches great importance to the fact that Federal licensing need not—and in the present bill does not—clothe the Federal Trade Commission with additional powers to regulate business. The law itself sets forth the conditions attached to the granting of licenses; the commission would merely determine whether those conditions were being met and issue or withhold licenses accordingly.

Under the O'Mahoney-Borah bill, for instance, no licensed corporation could employ children under 16 years of age, nor discriminate against women employes. The rights of employes to organize and bargain collectively would also have to be recognized and, of course, dishonest, fraudulent, and unfair trade practices would be banned. The F. T. C. would also be given extensive authority to demand reports and examine books and records of companies suspected of violating the licensing conditions imposed upon them. With all due respect to Senator O'Mahoney, the administration of this proposed law would inevitably entail the exercise of a vast deal of discretionary power by the regulatory authorities.

Another section of the bill is designed to protect investors by defining corporate practices which must be followed by concerns engaged in interstate commerce.

Many of the conditions attached to the licensing of corporations seem fair and reasonable and are, in fact, frequently required under existing laws. But the immediate objectives of the present bill, desirable or otherwise, pale into insignificance in face of the regulatory possibilities suggested by legislation of this type. For example, the bill provides that if the F. T. C. finds abuses in the form of low wage scales "contrary to the public interest and policy of this act," it may recommend to Congress a minimum wage for the lowest paid classes of unskilled workers.

Although Senator O'Mahoney stresses the fact that the commission could not set wages by decree without Congressional authorization, the bill, if passed, would open the way to Federal wage fixation. Moreover, a steady extension of regulation by way of licensing appears to be foreshadowed in a provision ordering the F. T. C. to "develop a general program for the coordination, stabilization and orderly development of the basic industries of the United States and for a more equitable distribution of the earnings of commerce, trade and industry to those employed therein and to the investor of capital therein." For that purpose a national industrial conference would be summoned and the commission would be asked to submit a report of its recommendations to Congress.

The licensing bill, in short, would open the way for a progressive tightening of Federal control over the Nation's industries. Furthermore, the bill endeavors to stretch the definition of interstate commerce to cover all commerce, "whether or not carried on wholly within a particular State which affects other States and which is not completely within a particular State," as well as all commerce which "concerns" more States than one. It is also affirmed that the power to regulate commerce includes the power to promote a more equitable distribution of its benefits and "to foster and enlarge such commerce by improving the standard of living among ultimate consumers and purchasers of commodities."

If this liberal conception of the scope of interstate commerce should be acceptable to the courts, it seems plain that the power to license might be extended to establish a far-reaching Federal control over most of the Nation's industries by simply attaching conditions to the right to do business. This power of decreeing life or death, even if limited by statute, would necessarily impose tremendous administrative, investigative and policing tasks upon Government enforcement agencies.

It seems more than strange that two Senators who have fought vigorously for the upholding of constitutional rights and constitutional methods of procedure should sponsor a plan that is so alien to the liberal democratic traditions of our economic life.

Survey Graphic's Jubilee.

Mixed with the sense of sound accomplishment, which the editors of Survey Graphic must feel in publishing their twenty-fifth anniversary number this month, must be a slight tinge of disappointment. The magazine has lost much of the uniqueness which so marked it in 1912. No longer has it a monopoly on discussions of social problems.

The widespread interest in social problems today is suggested by the proposal to add a Secretary of Social Welfare to the President's Cabinet. Especially during recent years the country has witnessed an amazingly rapid development of its social conscience. Nor is that awareness of human problems confined to legislators or governmental agencies. It is keenly reflected also in the growth of community chests and numerous other volunteer agencies devoted to the welfare of underprivileged groups.

Fred K. Hoehler pointedly analyzes this evolutionary trend in the jubilee Survey Graphic. Twenty-five years ago, he says, the poormaster was only one step above the dog-catcher. Today not only old-age protection agents but all the many public officers concerned with social security are coming into their own.

This change in public thinking has not been missed by the press—daily, weekly or monthly. And today, like a pioneer who has lived to see the growth of a city where he turned the first sod, Survey Graphic finds itself only one of many publications offering such articles as "Working With Nature," "What 19,000 Doctors Could Tell Us," and "New Stepping Stones for American Homes"—to cite but three in its current issue.

Here as always, however, imitation has been the sincerest flattery.

Titulescu Returns.

The return to Bucharest after 16 months of exile abroad of Nicolas Titulescu, Rumania's ablest statesman of the post-war period, occurs at a very crucial moment in his nation's history.

During the past few years Rumania has been violently pulled in opposite directions by the forces struggling for mastery there. Today, as heretofore, Rumania is a member of the Little Entente and an ally of France. But the pull which the Fascist powers individually and together exert on the Bucharest government is very considerable. And it has grown materially as the totalitarian dictators have won one victory of prestige after another.

Indeed, the leader and spokesman of the Rumanian Fascist Iron Guards has openly declared his hostility to the western democracies, the Little Entente and the League of Nations.

"I am opposed to all of them," he said, "I am for an alliance with Germany and Italy—with the nationalist revolutionary states and anti-bolshevism. Within 48 hours of my party's achieving victory, Rumania will have concluded an alliance with Berlin and Rome."

With this state of mind Titulescu is completely out of sympathy. Rumania's interests, as he sees it, lie in upholding the doctrine of collective security as embodied in the League Covenant, in maintaining the alliances with France, Czechoslovakia, Yugoslavia and Poland, and in fostering friendship with the Soviet Union. And up to the time he was forced out as foreign minister in the summer of 1936, as a result of a maneuver by Premier Tatarescu, his policy consisted in carrying through precisely such a program.

It is a curious circumstance that Titulescu's return to Rumania was made possible as a result of a deal between the National Peasant Party, which supports him, and the reactionary Iron Guard, which has been said to be responsible for an assault on his life.

The Iron Guard leaders have now promised not to molest Titulescu. But they have indicated that they will vehemently oppose his return to power. The purpose of their deal with the National Peasant Party was simply to form a united front against the government to make possible a free and unintimidated election. In Rumania elections are more often "made" than freely held.

In any event Titulescu is back, and except in the unlikely event of an Iron Guard victory, it is hard to believe that much time will elapse before he is again in the foreign office. In fact he may be at his old post in time to greet Foreign Minister Delbos when the latter visits Bucharest on his round of visits to the allies of France in eastern Europe.

The Airplane's Worth.

For all its spectacular development the net worth of the airplane to the world is still far from certain. In China and Spain the evil uses to which it can be put are only too evident.

But there is, of course, another side to the picture. Not long ago a plane saved a small boy's life by flying him to Baltimore where a swallowed pin could be safely removed. And, only a few days later, a plane located a freighter foundering off Hatteras and led rescue ships to its position. These, however, are rather obvious benefits of flying.

A less apparent but far more significant service is rendered mankind by the airplane when it draws the world closer together. Utopia is a single, not widely divided, state. A case in point, perhaps, is seen in the report from Honolulu that the Pacific "Clippers" have given Hawaiians their first taste of fresh oysters. So delighted are the islanders that beds of the bivalves are now being sown on every shore.

Thus the airplane spreads the earth's best riches. Next summer, probably, poi will be common fare on Chincoteague Island.

We hereby close entries for the year and make our annual award of a cut-glass toothpick for the most outstanding instance of damning with faint praise to the New York critic who said that Al Jolson's voice is just as good as it ever was.

Although 1940 is still around a couple of corners, already a number of Presidential impossibilities are being prominently mentioned.

Federal Employes' Children.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

On November 20 my daughter, aged 22, died in an auto accident in Florida. I want publicly to lay responsibility for the premature death of a healthy and highly competent young woman to the Government under which she was born and reared.

There is logic in events that postulates a first cause which leads to an ultimate climax. The first cause of this tragedy I charge is the inequitable civil service policy with its exaggerated pay rates and its limitation to the number of persons in a family that may hold jobs. Were salaries based more nearly on a personal budget cost of living with allowance for dependent children, there would be no logical ground for depriving children of parents employed by the Government from having a position.

My daughter was a competent stenotypist and typist and held a temporary position in the Government and while having a high efficiency rating was laid off for economy reasons while thousands of spinsters, bachelors and childless married couples are receiving incomes far in excess of the value of their services or their economic needs.

Having lost her job in the Government and unable to find another position in Washington, she went on a visit to Florida and while there found employment. At her tender age she should have been at home under the protection and care of her parents, and in all probability would have lived many years to be a joy to her parents and of service to the Nation.

I am neither a fatalist nor a believer in Providence and there is no way by which her life can be restored or that her parents may be indemnified for the vast cost involved in supporting her to mature life. But as her father I shall prosecute more vigorously the balance of my years the demands I have made for years past for a more humane pay policy and the right of qualified sons and daughters in Washington to hold positions with their parents in the Federal service.

"Hilarious Joke?"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I read with interest the statement in your paper of the reaction of young Vittorio Mussolini to his murder of Ethiopian tribesmen—"the quintessence of beauty."

The young man goes into it in a carnival spirit. At the controls of the most modern of bombing planes, and with his finger on the triggers of the deadliest of machine guns he has made a great hero of himself by slaughtering a great number of helpless and primitive natives.

But would the whole thing be such a hilarious joke if he had had to meet the Ethiopians as man to man equipped with only the antique weapons of his enemy?

Dual Government.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

I thank Mr. Westbrook Pegler for his column of November 30, "Federal vs. State Government." I believe that I'm speaking for a majority of the thinking make-up of this composite creation we boast of as the greatest nation on earth.

This "State Rights" business strikes me as a convenient stuffed club for our alarmists, professional or occasional, whenever there is a move of national proportions to threaten any of the varieties of graft derived through keeping authority split up on State lines.

Our precious system of dual government seems most precious as a basis for a dual or multiple system of taxation to catch the unwary, bog down business enterprise in all direction, give us the most expensive government on earth, and make it at the same time the least responsible, and the most difficult to reckon with in its dealings with other nations.

Mural Sketches Approved.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

In reference to your editorial of November 26, entitled "A Daniel Come to Judgment," I notice the following:

In the future, if more murals are to be painted on the walls of public institutions, outline sketches should perhaps be submitted to the proper authorities. Then all would-be objectors could be given a chance to have their say before actual work is begun.

May I state that outline sketches were submitted and the proper request forms were signed for by the hospital authorities. Without this customary request for this work no work would have been attempted on the hospital walls.

A Visitor's Experience.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

May I say how kind I have found the people of Washington to a stranger? Trips about town have seemed a bit complicated. The conductors have been most courteous, and fellow passengers on street car and bus have taken a personal interest in seeing that I've made connections.

While waiting for a bus one rainy day, a lady offered me the shelter of her umbrella.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Last Monday I left the premiere of "To Be Continued" thoroughly disgusted and with only a faint hope that the dramatic critics of Washington would condemn it as utterly as it deserved. My want of full confidence in the gentlemen who tell us whether our plays are good or bad was born of disappointments spread out over three seasons during which it has seemed to me that our critics were sometimes over generous in praise of what the National Theater has had to offer us.

"To Be Continued," however, drew the censure it deserved. Our foremost critics, Mr. Nelson Bell among them, are to be congratulated in that they damned Mr. Charles George's play as a too frank exposition of our sexual impulses. It was all of that. Indeed it was more. It was a beastly thing which depended almost wholly for its "comedy" not upon wit but upon various aspects of the passions which it brazenly spread before the gaze of all in that audience, young and old, innocent and sophisticated.

The production of such a play, especially upon the boards of Washington's only first-class theater of legitimate drama, was outrageous and makes one wonder whether any censors could have passed upon it and, if they had, why our own local police did not close the show once its nature was disclosed. Added to this, with the exception of the work done by a few members of the cast, the production smacked strongly of amateurism.

Had we really been to the National Theater in Washington or was it the first night of a burlesque in a small town out West?

Radio Propaganda.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Why not shut down on propaganda by foreign dictators brought to us over the radio? That the main purpose of this broadcasting of so-called information is propaganda has been clearly demonstrated by well-informed writers, especially in connection with what has happened in South America. Propaganda for Italian fascism is presented over the radio, not only from foreign countries, but also in New York City and in many other localities, including Washington, D. C., through the medium of advertising business enterprises conducted mainly by Italians.

In fascist countries all attempts to put forth propaganda under the guide of entertainment or information—propaganda hostile to the regime in power—are stopped immediately. For these reasons every purchaser of a radio in Italy has to have a permit, which is granted only to those not suspected of being against fascism. Moreover if a radio owner gets caught tuning in on broadcasting from loyalist Spain, or from any other source that brings praise of the policies of governments other than fascist, he is severely punished. His radio is confiscated, and, further, he is liable to get a long term of imprisonment and a harsh beating.

We in America are aware that this foreign propaganda by newspapers, lectures and radio is being poured out every day and with absolute immunity to the perpetrators. The defense of the propagandists is that to put limits on their broadcasting is a violation of the principle of fredom of speech, and they gain virtual support from many well-meaning radicals, liberals, and progressives who fail to take into account the fact that the fascist propagandists are seeking and have rights here that are denied to their own peoples and foreigners under their own regime.

There is a plan on foot in Congress to seek for further investigation of the un-American activities of Nazis, fascists and communists in our midst. I hope that this project will carry through and that some means will be found to defeat this bootleg propaganda over the radio and otherwise against our American ideals of government. There is the conspicuous danger that these propagandists will try to help in setting up here, as they have in other countries, a totalitarian state with all its attendant evils.

Formula For Checking Recession

To the Editor of The Post—Sir:

Several formulas have been suggested for checking the business recession. Most of them include the balancing of the budget, but are silent as to how to accomplish that object. Therefore, I submit a formula:

1. Balance the budget by a national sales tax which would exempt food, fuel, clothing and medicines.

2. Try as far as possible to shift the burden of relief of the unemployed from the national to the State governments, and to that end, empower each State to conduct a State-wide lottery, the proceeds therefrom to be used for the relief of the unemployed and indigent.

3. Restore public confidence by having the Government take the position that no more lawlessness is going to be tolerated in the name of labor or anyone else; that no group of man shall be permitted to advance their views by any action involving force or violence or the seizure of the property of anyone else.

4. Have Messrs. Green and Lewis pledge the maintenance of the status quo for one year; that is to say, no more strikes until business is safely on the right side of the ledger.

5. Repeal or modify the undistributed profits tax and capital gains tax.

6. Retire all tax-exempt securities by the issue in lieu thereof of non-tax-exempt securities. If that cannot legally be done, then tax the income from tax-exempt securities, as proposed by Senator Glass.

7. Encourage home building, but in doing it be careful not to destroy the small builder. It is idle to urge the building of homes by private capital if simultaneously the Government says, "Go ahead, Mr. Small Builder, and I shall take your profits in taxes and use them to subsidize mass constructions with which you cannot compete and which will destroy the value of what you have built."

The Post Impressionist

Neighbor John.

"THAT'S it."

"That's the house," we used to say in those first few months.

It was a big white frame dwelling with green blinds, a brass knocker and some of that colonial woodwork that looks like two banisters doing a ballet. The house was directly on the boulevard to Washington, but still managed to look private. The main door was on the cross street, and there were two other doors at the rear, half facing each other in the angle of a wing. These doors would be useful, we reasoned, to a man whose many acquaintances were not all friendly with each other.

It happened we had to drive past this house often, and we noticed its details gradually. The small side yard, enclosed by a low hedge with a paling gate, was evidently just as it had been when there were no other houses in that Alexandria neighborhood. Therein, perhaps, a labor leader might get back to fundamentals by puttering over a few flowers. Or if he did not like flowers, he might get a little air without being seen by too many people.

We never saw anybody puttering in the yard, however, or even simply taking the air. Although my wife and I pointed out to our friends the home of John L. Lewis, we could not espy any sign of life there. In our imagination we could hear heavy footsteps pounding down the halls, picture a huge rough figure looming in doorways which once framed Virginia aristocrats, and envision drawing rooms awed to silence by the stare of a leonine face. But that was just imagination. We never saw anybody. • • • •

We asked Jack.

"They haven't moved in yet," he said. "They're still living in their old house."

Then the painters came. Or so the papers said—we didn't see any painters; they must always have gone home when we passed by. It was regarded as ironical that these A. F. of L. workers should be employed by the chief of the C. I. O. Yet Mr. Lewis was in the same boat we all are in these days—he had to have somebody to work for him, and he couldn't help it if their affiliations were hostile. We wondered if he even considered there was a matter of principle involved.

When the job was partly finished the painters had to quit because their union went on strike. This development was found even more ironical. The house got its new coat finished somehow, though, and the result was noble. It was a house a capitalist would be proud to own. Still we saw nobody around it. This Lewis was a mere symbol, we decided, who owned a mansion the way Uncle Sam owns the Lincoln Memorial.

One day we had startling proof that the Lewises really existed. We came home to find a bewildered young colored man on the sidewalk in front of our apartment house.

"You live here?" We assured him we did. "I sho' am glad. I done rung all 'em bells and I cain't fin' nobody."

"Did you want to deliver a package?"

"Naw, Mizz Jawn Lewis send me over here to get a bed."

"Who did she say had the bed?"

"She din't say."

"What apartment is it supposed to be in?"

"Don' know that neither." He grinned. We decided he had best go back to Mrs. Lewis for more information. That was the last we heard of the matter. We never knew whether Mrs. Lewis got her bed or not. It seemed as if anybody who sent for a bed must be moving in, but when we drove by that evening there was no sign of activity about the big white house. Maybe powerful men have some special way of moving, so that their floor lamps, kitchen tables, pictures, and half-used jars of preserves do not have to sit out on the sidewalk like other people's.

• • • •

Some weeks later we had guests from out of town. On the way to a restaurant dinner we passed up the usual side street.

"That's John L. Lewis' house," I said, pointing. "And—there's John!"

It surely was—there could be no mistaking that mane of hair. Mr. Lewis was standing near the curb, talking to some people in a 1929 Ford sedan.

We drove around the block once because Bill wanted to get a good look. Although this man was undoubtedly John Lewis, he was not the man you read about. In the first place, he wasn't big—he was not as tall as I am. And he didn't look angry. He looked quite pleasant, even mild. When we went by the second time he was still talking to the people in the Ford, and it occurred to me that he would present a neighborly appearance behind that paling gate, if he would stand there and chat with Alexandrians about his son's college grades and the need of some rain on his lawn. We drove on quickly to avoid offending a neighbor.

Now we want to see Hugo Black. He lives in Alexandria, too—or so the papers say.

TURNER ROSE.

Outwitting A Wife.

The following curious entry is in the register of burials of Lymington Church, under the year 1736: "Samuel Baldwin, Esq., sojourned in this parish, was immersed without the Needles, sans ceremonie, May 20." This was performed in consequence of an earnest wish the deceased had expressed a little before his dissolution, in order to disappoint the intention of his wife, who had repeatedly assured him in their domestic squabbles (which were very frequent) that, if she survived him she would revenge her conjugal sufferings by dancing on his grave.

Fair Enough

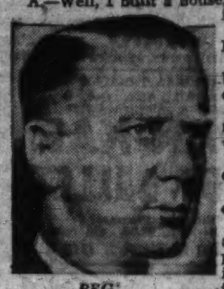
By
Westbrook Pegler

Geo. Spelvin On Housing.

GEORGE SPELVIN, American, appeared before the Housing Commission and testified as follows:

Q.—You claim authority on housing? Why?

A.—Well, I built a house, I own a house and I live in a house.



PEGLER

Q.—You built a house? Built it yourself?

A.—No; I mean I paid for building it. I work in an office.

Q.—You think a Government housing program would run into trouble?

A.—Well, judging by my own case, yes.

Q.—State your experience.

A.—Well, there was the sewer. The real estate promoter promised to put in a sewer, but he went into bankruptcy, and the sewer isn't in. He had several corporations. Every time he bought another lot he would form another corporation, and the corporation that sold us our lot went bankrupt. So the sanitary inspector wouldn't let us dig a cesspool, and the corporation couldn't build the sewer. So they had a receiver, and after a long time, with our house standing idle, they got things straightened out, but the receiver and the receiver's lawyers had taken all the money. So finally the town built the sewer and taxed us for it.

• • • •

SAME WAY about the sidewalks and the pavement. We paid for them in the purchase of the lot, but after the little corporation went bankrupt we had to pay for them again, in taxes. The real estate man still had plenty of money, personally, but this corporation was broke.

Q.—Was there something about a furnace?

A.—Yes, sir. It seems the contractor made a deal with a furnace contractor, and he installed an old furnace, just painted over, instead of a new one, as the contractor specified. It wouldn't heat and the pipe froze, and then the furnace blew up, and we had to move to a boarding house while they fixed it. I had to redecorate the boarding house walls where the children drew pictures with their crayons, all because of that furnace.

Then, when they went to fix the frozen pipes, they discovered that the builder didn't leave that little trap door so you could get at the pipes to fix them. So we had to get a carpenter to tear out the wall and a plasterer to make it over. Meantime, this new plumber discovered that the original plumber had used wax instead of solder on a big joint 'way back under the bathroom floor. That was leaking, too. He could see it with his flashlight but couldn't get at it, so we had to wreck the floor and rebuild it.

• • • •

WELL, THEN, the furnace contractor, it seems, didn't have any backing, so he couldn't replace the furnace with a good one. And then the junkman who sold him the second-hand furnace came and got it, claiming he had not been paid for it. And then the furnace workmen sued the furnace contractor for their wages and slapped a mechanic's lien on my whole house. They said I had no right to let the junkman take the furnace off the place so they couldn't attach it. I never knew they could do that.

Q.—Any other liens?

A.—I guess you could call them liens. Anyway, some lumber company that sold the builder the shingles served a paper on me because he didn't pay them, although I paid him.

Then some workmen who worked for the builder on another job served another lien on me, claiming I had to pay them a balance of $400 which I owed the builder because he owed them some wages. I said I wasn't intending to pay him the $400 because of all the expense he put me to. But they say I have to pay them the $400 and then sue the builder for not performing his contract. But he claims he is broke, too, so where do I get off suing him?

Well, we had to rebuild the roof because it leaked, and some walls where the water destroyed the plaster, and now some union stands in front of my house yelling "Scab!" because some of the workmen weren't union. But I didn't hire them. The contractor wouldn't let me. Anyway, that would have canceled his responsibility.

Q.—So you think the Government might have serious difficulty building 3,000,000 houses?

A.—Difficulty! It would be a war.

The commission adjourned sine die.

The Once Over

By
H. I. Phillips

The Housewife Speaks.

I like the more abundant life—
Oh, sweet is its appeal!
I root for it like any wife
With reasonable zeal;
I think the notion's very swell—
The aim seems extra sweet,
But I would like it just as well
If it included meat!

This project for a better day,
By governmental plan
Gets my approval and okay—
I've been a New Deal fan;
I like the talk of More-For-All—
The fifty-fifty break—
But how about a pork-chop small
And now and then a steak?

These regulations so complete—
The laws and rules and such,
To put us on the easy seat
Delight me very much;
The talk of days so gay and glad,
With no more care or grief,
Is great, but still I wish I had
A slice of ham or beef.

These pictures of a fuller life
For me and you, and you,
With peace replacing storm and strife,
And skies forever blue . . .
They cheer me to the deepest core,
And life seems, ah, so sweet—
Until I enter any store
To buy some grub to eat.

The emphasis on greater joy
For all good Democrats—
For man or woman, girl or boy,
In all those fireside chats . . .
The program seems to me okay,
And goes right to my head—
Until I find what I must pay
For butter, eggs and bread.

This broad life we are all to know,
With every comfort split,
And blessings in an endless flow—
I'm very strong for it;
The program to my heart appeals—
I think it simply great,
But could I have a few square meals
At low cost while I wait?

Tick-Tick, Tick-Tick.

Maybe the desire of some politicians to get control of the utilities is due to a realization what soft pickings there would be if an administration had all the quarter meters.

Cicero Fulpan Stems Recession

Morning Glory Clerk Saved Grocery Job By Solon.

By Louis M. Jiggitts.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Morning Glory,
Oct. 31, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I have been working for the Morning Glory Greater Emporium, Seed, Feed and Fancy Groceries Company, Unincorporated (We Sell Below Costs) and voting for you 20 years and now it looks like I am going to lose my job unless you do something quick. Mr. Benny Beetel who owns the store said the business recession had him plenty worried and he'd have to cut me off if Congress didn't do something about it when it meets. He said he was sorry but if business recedes much further my job is going to recede with it, and I would like to know what you are going to do about it.

Your friendly supporter,
CORNELIUS KORNTASSEL.

P.S. What's the difference between a depression and a recession?

Washington, D. C.
Nov. 2, 1937.

Mr. Cornelius Korntassel,
Morning Glory.
My dear Mr. Korntassel:

I regret that the Congressman is in a very important conference today but I can assure you that he will regret to learn that your job is about to recede and will be glad to help you in any way possible.

Assuring you that it is a great pleasure to give you this encouragement, I am

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

P.S. A recession is when you start down the second time before you get all the way up from the first time down.

Morning Glory,
Nov. 4, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I am glad you are going to help me as Mr. Beetel looked kind of blue this morning when nobody came in the store except Mr. Willie Boodel who just sampled the loose candy and talked. Mr. Boodel always makes Mr. Beetel blue as he is about the biggest sampler in Morning Glory and Mr. Beetel says it would pay him if Mr. Boodel never came into the store to buy anything as he loves the loose candy barrel almost as much as a Congressman loves the pork barrel which I reckon will give you some idea of what kind of sampler Mr. Boodel is.

Since you have promised to help me I want you to write to Mr. Beetel and ask him to keep me. I know this will help as Mr. Beetel talks a good deal about you. I have heard him say that you probably did as well in Congress as you would anywhere else and that you never did any particular harm to this district that he knew of, and that he always voted for you as he is a strict party man.

Thanking you for this favor and hoping that you will make the letter strong, I am

Your friendly supporter,
CORNELIUS KORNTASSEL.

P.S. What happens when you go down the third time?

Washington, D. C.
Nov. 6, 1937.

Mr. Cornelius Korntassel,
Morning Glory.
My dear Mr. Korntassel:

I regret that the Congressman is busy again today and cannot reply to your very interesting letter, but I am sure that he will be sorry to learn that Mr. Boodel makes Mr. Beetel blue. You request that the Congressman write to Mr. Beetel asking him to retain you in his business. I am very sorry indeed to inform you that, although the Congressman is always anxious to assist a constituent, he has made it a rule of long standing not to use his influence to interfere with private business.

Trusting that you will understand the Congressman's position, I am

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE.
Secretary.

P. S. You drown.

Morning Glory,
Nov. 8, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

What do you mean you never interfere with private business? I told my wife about what your secretary said about your long standing rule and she said that Congress has been fooling around with private business a good while now and she didn't see why you had to be different.

Mr. Beetel says he might be able to keep me if the special session helps business. Please let me know what you will do as soon as possible.

Your friendly supporter,
CORNELIUS KORNTASSEL.

CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Washington, D. C.
Nov. 10, 1937.

Mr. Cornelius Korntassel,
Morning Glory,
Dear Mr. Korntassel:

It is a pleasure to inform you that the present business recession has my close attention and I am giving it the very serious consideration it deserves. I am certain that past experience has proved that I am always alert to the interests of my constituents and I have already conferred with other leaders on the possibilities of taking some concrete action to assist business during the special session of Congress. However, the very nature of the problem prohibits undue haste, and calls for calm and cool deliberation, and I trust that you will not be unduly alarmed over present conditions now that we leaders are giving it serious consideration.

Assuring you that I am glad to paint this encouraging picture for you, and trusting that you will keep cool, I am

Yours very truly,
CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Morning Glory,
Nov. 12, 1937.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I'll keep cool all right if you don't do something quick. With December nearly here and me about to lose my job and not having any money to buy wood and coal I guess I'll keep plenty cool.

I read your letter to Mr. Beetel but he is still blue. Please let me know at once just what you are going to do about it.

Your anxious supporter,
CORNELIUS KORNTASSEL.

Mr. Cornelius Korntassel,
Morning Glory.
My dear Mr. Korntassel:

The Congressman is very busy greeting his colleagues and giving out advice today as Congress convenes for an auspicious special session, but as soon as he can find time I am sure that he will be delighted to inform you what he is going to do about Mr. Beetel's blues.

Assuring you that we are pleased to serve the Congressman's constituents at all times, I am

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I want to know what you are going to do about business recovery and not Mr. Beetel's blues. If you'll get the blues out of business that will take the blues out of Mr. Beetel and me both.

People here are beginning to talk about you and Congress and wondering what you are going to do about this business recession right now. The Morning Glory Monthly Farm and Business Calendar came out today and the editor said, "The time to save a ship is when the ship's bottom is on the water's top and not the ship's top on the water's bottom." Miss Pinky Tulepp also had a poem in it about business which you might like to hear as follows:

Business will come back
When Congress takes another tack
And let's little business off the rack
As theory takes a seat in back.

What do you think about it, too?

Please let me know what you are going to do about present conditions as soon as possible. If you don't hurry it may be too late for me.

Your very anxious supporter,
CORNELIUS KORNTASSEL.

Mr. Cornelius Korntassel,
Morning Glory.
Dear Mr. Korntassel:

I appreciate your recent very interesting letter, but I am disturbed that a constituent of mine should have any misconceptions of congressional actions. I am afraid that

Trap In Candy Barrel Invites Law Suit On Employer.

Miss Pinky Tulepp, for whom I have the highest regard and whose very splendid poetry I have often admired, has misunderstood the purpose of recent legislation. Of course, the only desire of Congress is to help little business, and even the suggestion that we have placed little business on the rack is profoundly disturbing to me. I trust that you will do all in your power to correct such a misconception in anyone's mind.

I am glad to inform you that we are giving the closest consideration to the undivided profits tax, the capital gains tax and the problem of balancing the budget. And you may rest assured that we intend to do something definite about these taxes and to balance the budget if possible to do so without curtailing certain expenditures highly important for very obvious reasons.

Trusting that this will prove encouraging to Mr. Beetel, I am

Yours sincerely,
CICERO FULPAN, M. C.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I read your letter to Mr. Beetel this morning and he wanted to know if the "expenditures for very obvious reasons" were to keep Congressmen in office. I think your letter would have helped if Mr. Boodel hadn't been the only one to come in again this morning. After he left Mr. Beetel said, "Corny (that's short for both of my names), it looks bad." And I'm afraid if you don't stop thinking and do something else he's going to say, "Corny, it looks like your end."

What do you mean about the undivided profits tax? I didn't know anybody was making any profits now from the way Mr. Beetel looks.

If I don't hear some good news from you by Dec. 1st I'm afraid I'm going to hear some bad news from Mr. Beetel.

Your despairing supporter,
CORNELIUS KORNTASSEL.

November 23, 1937.

Mr. Cornelius Korntassel,
Morning Glory.
My Dear Mr. Korntassel:

I fear that Mr. Beetel's erroneous impression is going to get the Congressman disturbed again. Of course, the Congressman is interested only in expenditures for the benefit of his constituents. I hasten to assure you that his only concern is for those whom he represents, and he has often declared that a Congressman's personal aspirations should be sacrificed for the public good. I trust that Mr. Beetel will now fully understand.

If Mr. Boodel continues to annoy Mr. Beetel and the candy barrel, why don't you do something to stop him?

Trusting that you will write again when you have any further problems to solve, I am

Yours sincerely,
WILLA DOOLITTLE,
Secretary.

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

I told Mr. Beetel about the expenditures and he said he thinks he understands all right. I also told him about Miss Doolittle's suggestion that he do something about Mr. Boodel and he said he would do like you and give it his serious consideration but he hoped it wouldn't take him so long to get results.

I hope you have solved the business recession by now and can let me have some good news for Mr. Beetel.

Your still worried constituent,
CORNELIUS KORNTASSEL.

Mr. Cornelius Korntassel,

My dear Mr. Korntassel:

I regret that the Congressman has retired with a headache, but so many unexpected problems have come up to harass the leaders since the special session was called that a headache was inevitable. But you can take great cheer. The Congressman in conference with other leaders has insisted that something specific be done to stimulate business either at this special session or early in January. Of course, you realize that when the Congressman insists, action always follows.

Assuring you that I am most delighted to convey this cheerful message to you, I am

Yours sincerely,

Congressman Cicero Fulpan,
Washington, D. C.
Dear Congressman Fulpan:

You and Mr. Beetel have made me very happy. He told me this afternoon that he noticed the government was going to do something about housing and taxation and that he would keep me through December to see what happens. Mr. Beetel was also feeling good about what happened to Mr. Boodel this morning. He had hid a small steel trap under the top layer of assorted jelly beans, sugar plums and chocolate creams in the candy barrel and when Mr. Boodel put his hand in the barrel this morning the trap sprung on it. Mr. Beetel said he hadn't been so happy since his Uncle Mortimer died and left him the business. He said he would probably be sued but it was worth it.

I want to thank you for all you have done to the government for me and I want you to know you have a grateful constituent.

Wishing you a Merry Christmas, a Happy New Year, and hoping you stay in Washington, as the song says, until you grow too old to dream, I am

Your most happy constituent,

Dear Mr. Korntassel:

Your letter has pleased me very much. I assure you that it has been my great pleasure to assist you in this important matter. I am always happiest when I am serving a constituent.

With my best regards to you and your splendid consort, I am

Bait For Hitler

Barnet Nover.

Whose Colonies For Germany?

HITLER'S repeated demands for colonies have at last aroused Great Britain and France to examining what, if anything, should be done to appease the Third Reich.

At London this week the two democratic powers have apparently worked out an approach to the problem of colonial adjustment. But whether their plan will satisfy the Fuehrer is open to considerable question. For what Great Britain and France clearly are aiming at is to get Germany to abandon certain dangerous ambitions in Europe in return for the promise of future rewards.

The Anglo-French communique says:

Preliminary examination was made of the colonial question in all its aspects. It was recognized that this question was not one that could be considered in isolation and, moreover, would involve a number of other countries. It was agreed the subject would require much extended study.

• • • •

IN OTHER WORDS, Great Britain and France are not prepared to reject categorically Germany's demands for colonies although unwilling, at this moment, to make any concrete offer of territory to that nation. In the opinion of the democratic powers, moreover, any redistribution of colonies would have to be part of a general peace settlement. And, lastly, the communique suggests that if concessions are to be made to Germany, Great Britain and France should not be the only ones to make them.

The plan in its present broad outlines is a well-intentioned one. It reflects a laudable readiness on the part of the London and Paris governments to try to work out some equitable arrangement with Hitler which would ease existing tensions in Europe and give that jittery continent a breathing spell of real peace.

• • • •

THE WEAKNESS of the plan is that it takes for granted what cannot be taken for granted at all.

It is by no means clear, for instance, that Hitler would agree to abandon his ambition in central and eastern Europe in return for colonies. It is much more likely that he would drop his colonial campaign in return for a free hand nearer home. At any rate any colonial offer by the democratic powers might and probably would be interpreted in Berlin as a sign of French and British weakness and further proof, therefore, that a policy of bluff and bluster pays.

Nor would any colonial territory which other nations might give the Third Reich ease, to any important extent, that country's present economic and financial difficulties. If given an inch, Germany might then want the whole ell. Certainly Japan was not long satisfied with Manchuria, nor does Italy show any signs of being satisfied with the conquest of Ethiopia alone. The appetite for conquest grows with the eating.

• • • •

YET LEAVING aside all that, there remains the enormous difficulties in the way of any repartition of colonial areas which would satisfy Germany even a little

Seven nations hold under mandate colonies that once were German—France, Great Britain, Belgium, Japan, the Union of South Africa, New Zealand and Australia. And not a single one has thus far shown any readiness to return all or even an important part of the land they took from the Reich. In Great Britain, for instance, the very same elements which are most clamorous for an Anglo-German deal are not infrequently the very ones opposing with greatest fervor the giving up of an inch of British territory.

This attitude may change and probably would change if real peace could be assured as a result of the satisfaction of Germany's colonial ambitions. But the change is hardly likely to be immediate or extensive.

• • • •

WELL, there are other colonial powers in addition to those which possess territory formerly belonging to Germany, namely, Spain, the Netherlands and Portugal.

It would be much pleasanter for France and Great Britain to satisfy Germany at the expense of some outside power. International friendships have often been cemented through deals whereby two nations have given away to each other territory belonging to a third power.

Thus Great Britain and France made peace in 1904 at the expense of Morocco; Egypt and England and Russia buried the hatchet in Persia's neck and at one time Great Britain sought to buy off Germany by a promise of Portuguese territory. In our own day there was the notorious Hoare-Laval deal which sought to win Italy to the side of Great Britain and France by offering Mussolini half of Ethiopia.

But that kind of procedure is not so simple now. The Dutch colonies in the East Indies are valuable not only to Holland but also to Great Britain. Spain's colonies are either unimportant or else possess an important strategic value, as is the case with Spanish Morocco.

The Portuguese colonies, a domain of 800,000 square miles, are of unequal value, but some of them are potentially rich. Possibly Germany's appetite might be satisfied at Portugal's expense, which would be a curious development indeed in view of the way Portugal and Germany have worked together in Spain. But from the British point of view the transfer of Portuguese Africa to the Reich would be only less of a blow than the transfer of any British African colony. Not only have the British invested large sums in the Portuguese colonies but the latter are on the alternate route to India via the Cape, a route that has grown in importance since Italy's rise to power.

Under the circumstances, therefore, a redistribution of colonial territory in Germany's favor would seem to be a matter for the future rather than the present.

No wonder, then, that the British, for their part, are now eager to have Czechoslovakia and Austria make concessions to Germany. If Hitler is hardly likely to be satisfied with "pie in the sky" maybe he would be appeased by pie on the plate. Only some British want Czechoslovakia and Austria to do the baking and the offering.

'Beautiful Like Fire'

By William Lyon Phelps

Chapman's Vast Vitality.

An important and interesting biography has recently appeared, called "John Jay Chapman and His Letters." It is written by the accomplished biographer, M. A. DeWolfe Howe, and is published by Houghton, Mifflin Co., Boston.

He was born in New York on March 2, 1862, and died November 1, 1933. He was a full-bearded, full-blooded masculine personality, and no one could be near him without feeling his tremendous vitality and his absolute sincerity. I wish I had known him better, but I am glad I did know him and had the opportunity of hearing him in conversation.

• • • •

Chapman was a rugged individualist who would cheerfully—yes, cheerfully—have died for his convictions. As it was, he lived for them. His biographer says "there was in Chapman himself, though more gifted in humor, a ferocity of feeling—intensity is hardly a strong enough word." Ferocity expresses it perfectly.

When he was a young man, at an evening party he invited a man to step out on the lawn, and there Chapman beat him about the head and shoulders with a stick, and although he had not inflicted a serious injury, he expiated this violence by deliberately placing his left hand in the fire and holding it there for some minutes.

He then took the horsecars to Boston, went to the hospital and "I showed the trouble to a surgeon, was put under ether, and the next morning waked up without the hand and very calm in my spirits."

• • • •

Prof. Dickinson S. Miller said of Chapman: "He is glowing and beautiful like fire, pure and purifying like fire, lambent, wayward, unshapeable, mischievous like fire, uncontrollable like fire, destructive like fire, seeking heaven like fire."

He said of himself that if he did right, it was an accident; but that he always was right. A fine saying; he had more confidence in his conscience than in his judgment.

Japanese Land 50,000 Men for Canton Drive

Vital Blow May Be Struck at British Trade; 13 Americans in Peril.

Copyright, 1937, by the United Press.

Shanghai (Thursday), Dec. 2.—Japan today was reported to have landed 50,000 soldiers in South China in an apparent drive on Canton, a principal source of Chinese military supplies.

Foreign military attaches said that if Canton is taken a vital blow will be struck at the huge trade of the British crown colony of Hongkong.

Hongkong exists almost exclusively on commerce with Canton, the financial and commercial center of South China.

Supported By Cruiser.

The Japanese army was reported supported by a cruiser and four destroyers, as well as the air force from Japanese aircraft carriers.

[Alarm was felt in Shanghai for the safety of 13 Americans marooned in an isolated region in the center of fighting. More than a week has passed without word from them.

U. S. Tug Is Returned.

Other developments during the past 24 hours included:

1. In Shanghai Japanese naval authorities returned the American-owned tug Feiting and apologized for its seizure Monday. Secretary Hull indicated in Washington the United States considered satisfactory the action of the Japanese. He said the Japanese offered suitable expressions of regret and apologies to American consular representatives in Shanghai.

Two confiscated Italian tugs also were returned.

2. In Nanking, the United States Embassy transmitted to American Consul General Clarence Gauss in Shanghai a proposal of the International Committee in the partly evacuated Chinese national capital for establishment of a neutral refugee zone around the city of Wuhu, southwest of Nanking on the Yangtze river.

France Sends Cruisers.

Paris, Dec. 1 (AP).—France sent a division of her most modern cruisers to the Far East today following reports from Tokyo that Japan might attempt to take control of the French Concession in Shanghai.

Officially the Navy ministry said the ships were off "on an endurance cruise" to Saigon, French Indo-China port, but officials left no doubt that the cruisers were ordered to stand ready for action.

Tokyo, Dec. 1 (AP).—A foreign office statement today announced Japan had joined Italy and Germany, her partners in an anti-Communist pact, in recognition of the Spanish insurgent regime of Francisco Franco.

"We find deep significance in this recognition," the statement said, "as being certain to promote the intimate relations now existing between Japan, Italy and Germany.

"The Spanish disturbance resulted from activities of the People's Front, which was created through the intrigues of the Comintern.

"Franco has been fighting to expel communism and anarchism.

"The present recognition establishes friendly relations between Japan and the Franco government, with which we are in agreement regarding the policy to be pursued toward communism."

London, Dec. 1 (AP).—The Duchess of Windsor today entered the British Who's Who.

The duchess was listed with the royal family, as were the wives of the other brothers of King George.

Her divorced husband, Ernest Aldrich Simpson, was not listed.

The former king was listed as follows:

"Edward Albert Christian George Andrew Patrick David (Duke of Windsor). Succeeded his father, King George V, January 20, 1936; abdicated December 1, 1936. Married, June 3, 1937, Mrs. Wallis Warfield."

Loyalists Repulse 5 Rebel Thrusts

Hendaye, Franco-Spanish Frontier, Dec. 1 (AP).—Spanish government reports tonight said the insurgents lost heavily in five futile attacks on government positions southwest of Toledo.

Insurgents announced the clean-up of government resistance in Asturias was completed.

In Tokyo, the Japanese government formally recognized the insurgent regime and Manchukuo was reported to have decided on similar action.

New Deal Near Utilities Peace; 2 Points at Issue

President Is Reported in Agreement on 2 Other Major Issues.

By the Associated Press.

Some of the peace terms suggested to President Roosevelt by Wendell Willkie, utilities executive, are "impossible" from the Administration view, informed persons said last night.

The Chief Executive and Willkie have reached tentative agreement on two major issues, it was said, but these points remained at issue:

1. Willkie's proposal that the public utility holding company act of 1935 be modified. He favored modification of the so-called "death sentence" on holding companies deemed unnecessary by the Government. The law should be changed, he said, to eliminate all intermediate holding companies within three years, but otherwise confirm existing holding companies in their present ownership of property.

2. Willkie's suggestion that policies of the Tennessee Valley Authority be modified. He advocated a compromise arrangement for the generation and distribution of power by both the Government and private utilities. The Government, he contended, should not make gifts or grants to help municipalities purchase private distribution systems.

No Interference.

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—Signs of rapprochement between the Administration and private utilities were increased today by statements of two utility executives who have already conferred at the White House with President Roosevelt—Floyd L. Carlisle, chairman of the Niagara Hudson Power Corporation, and of the Consolidated Edison Co. of New York, and Wendell L. Willkie, president of the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation.

At a meeting of the New York State public service commission, Carlisle said in no instance had the commission interferred with efforts of his companies to obtain new capital.

Willkie—whose proposals for a "peace pact" between the New Deal and private interests were contained in a memorandum submitted to the President, which was made public yesterday in Washington said, in an interview, that "prolonging the bitterness between corporate enterprise and government could only harm the country."

Cites Cost of Dams.

Chattanooga, Tenn., Dec. 1 (AP).—Rufus W. Putnam, former major of the United States Army engineers, testified today cost of the Tennessee Valley Authority's system of dams would be six times more than was necessary for improved navigation on the Tennessee River and its tributaries.

Putnam was a witness for 18 private utilities attacking in Federal court the authority's contention that navigation and flood control—not power generation—are its chief functions.

Soviet Polar Base Break-up Feared

London (Thursday), Dec. 2 (U.P.).—The Soviet "Polar" camp of four men, who have been living on an ice floe since May 21, is drifting rapidly toward Greenland, more than 600 miles from the North Pole and is in danger of breaking up, the party said in a radio message picked up by the Daily Express today.

Paper Calls on Britain To Bring Windsor Back

Glasgow, Scotland, Dec. 1 (AP).—The Socialist newspaper Forward demanded tonight that the British government bring the Duke and Duchess of Windsor back to England before "Prince Charming has to become a 'Wandering Jew.'"

"Let them come, and let the royal ladies all kiss and be friends," the newspaper urged. "It is clear the public still is more interested in the king who got the sack than in the king who is carrying on the job."

Cardenas Will Waive Extraordinary Powers

Mexico City, Dec. 1 (AP).—President Lazaro Cardenas, ending his third year in office, today announced he would not ask extraordinary power of Congress during its recess beginning December 31.

It will be the first time a Mexican President has been without the right to legislate by decree while Congress is in recess.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Now Is the Time for All Good Critics to Sum Up And Rate the 'Ten Best Pictures' of Arty Year

Call Is Out for National Selection From a Total of 518 Feature Films—Which Hardly Seems Enough; Variety's Charity Fund Swells; About the Abbey Player; 'Ribber' Comes to Town; Theater Notes.

THE postman, of all people, did us dirt yesterday.

If it had only been the usual bundle of unpaid bills that he left, or another sheaf of those insurance pamphlets advising what to do about the old pump now that it is beginning to miss on a few cylinders, or even that Olde Gifte Shoppe package of bait for procrastinating Christmas shoppers, it wouldn't have been so bad. But the fattest item in my towering stack of two letters was Editor Chester B. Bahn's nudge to get busy on the "Ten Best Films of the Year" in the sixteenth annual poll of the critics of America conducted by the Film Daily.

BELL.

That means a little more work, and work at this season of the year—this year in particular—is what the drayma desks ain't got nothing else but.

Mr. Bahn's subtly flattering letter is even a bit more ominous than usual. This selection of the "ten best" business is getting to be a more and more involved piece of guessing. More critics participate each year and the catalogue of eligible titles seems to grow longer as the time flits by. Having attained a far more uniform standard of excellence than ever before, the feature films released during a full year of studio production make a choice increasingly puzzling—especially since no living reviewer could possibly find it within his physical powers to view more than a fraction of the releases from which the choice of ten must be made.

For instance, a cursory examination of the list of eligibles released between November 1, 1936, and October 31, 1937, reveals a total of 518 entries—almost a picture a day to be looked at during the year. Now I ask you!

Then, too, there is the minor concern of a mounting volume of expert competition. More and more critics take a whirl at this thing each succeeding year. Last year's enrollment marked the peak of the 16 years the guessing game has been running, with a total of 523 drama desks taking part. More than that are expected to enter the lists this season.

How's about borrowing your rabbit's foot?

Treasurer Sam A. Galanty, of the Variety Club of Washington, reports that financially the club's recent annual dinner and dance was the most successful in the history of the showmen's organization. The entire net proceeds are to be turned into the Welfare Fund, from which are adminsitered the charitable enterprises aimed at the alleviation of suffering and the succor of the underprivileged. Despite the short time Variety has been in existence, it already has an enviable record in the relief of vital need.

• • • •

While not canceled—if it ever was definitely booked—one of the most eagerly awaited of the National Theater's attractions for this season is receding more and more into the distant future.

After a six-week run in "The Far-Off Hills," at the Ambassador Theater, in New York, the Abbey Theater Irish Players, from Dublin, have returned to their traditional policy and will offer a repertory program for the remainder of their stay on Broadway. If they heeded popular demand and permitted each play to remain for a run, they would not have time to make the tour that has been planned. This tour now is expected to begin in late January and one hopes that Washington is on the itinerary.

It is pointed out that the return of the Abbey Players to repertoire does not mean that they are unappreciative of the popularity that a long run indicates. Their purpose in coming to America, however, is more than a matter of applause and profits. They have a deep interest in the development of the theater as a whole and the Irish theater in particular. They are ambassadors without portfolios; they bring us the good will of the Irish Republic.

More power to them is what I always say.

• • • •

Another Hollywood visitor dropped out of the sky at College Park Airport yesterday afternoon at 4. It was Vince Barnett, the film colony's ace "ribber" and a character comedian of parts. Mr. Barnett is here for the fun of it, one is led to believe, and to "get under the skin" of all and Sundry with whom he comes in contact. If you are at some swanky party this next day or two and a clumsy little waiter spills a plate of hot soup down the back of your neck, or lathers the front of your board shirt with a charlotte russe, that will be Vince, doing his stuff in his best Beverly-Wilshire manner. And don't say I didn't warn you.

• • • •

Not all critics are nonproducers. Take this fellow Pare Lorentz for example—or don't take him and see if I care. Mr. Lorentz was formerly motion picture critic for Vanity Fair and Town and Country and now is movie editor of McCall's Magazine and Judge. He also is author of "The Private Life of the Movies," even if you never knew they had one.

But the point is that Mr. Lorentz likewise is author and producer of that eminently successful American documentary film, "The Plow That Broke the Plains." The wide attention and critical acclaim by that film prompted its creator to try his hand again and "The River" is the result.

This new Farm Security Administration documentary subject will be shown at the Rialto Theater next Tuesday evening before an invited audience of members of Congress, Cabinet and departmental officials, the Diplomatic Corps and the press. It is reputedly as good as the first one from the same source. This is probably the first time in history, incidentally, that a plow and a river have sprung from the same source.

All right, skip it.

A new amateur acting group has been formed among the personnel of the Lansburgh & Brother Department Store. According to their first announcement, just to hand—that was the second of my pile of two letters—the Lansburgh Playmakers will present two one-act plays in St. Paul's Auditorium, Fifteenth and V streets northwest, tomorrow night at 8:30. Congratulations, good luck, long life and everything.

Signs of the Times.

This thing can't go on forever, but since Jane Plummer Rice has taken the trouble to mail it in from Chevy Chase, Md., it seems no more than fair payment for the postage stamp to note that the double header she saw on a theater marquee in Waterville, Me., recently, was this:

"SLIM"
"SHE HAD TO EAT"

Washington Comes to the Screen

Above, Preston Foster and Kay Francis, as they appear in the leading roles in the Warner Brothers' film version of the stage play of "First Lady," opening on the screen at the Earle Theater tomorrow. The story is one of feminine politics in Washington drawing rooms. Left, Vincent Lopez, who will headline the Earle's new stage bill with his famous orchestra and group of specialists.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Community Center Department presents the Ballet Caravan in Roosevelt High School auditorium Wednesday night, under the direction of Lincoln Kirstein. Program: "Promenade" danced to Ravel's "Valses Nobles et Sentimentales," "Yankee Clipper" danced to music by Paul Bowles and "Encounter" danced to Mozart's "Haffner" Serenade.

What we have been hearing for some time about the ambient caravan of the School of American Ballet was exemplified last evening in the auditorium of Roosevelt High School—namely, that this troupe of 20 young dancers proves very satisfactorily that the choreographic art is flourishing healthily on our soil. Washington did not need the demonstration, for there is abundant evidence at hand in the sundry dancing groups and schools here, but the caravan takes its proof to communities not so well supplied, and it was pleasant to have them pause here on their way.

The primary characteristics of Lincoln Kirstein's group are youth and zeal. In their approach to their work they show a refreshing enthusiasm, and to even the stylized routines they impart vitality. Their dancing is spontaneous and completely devoid of that simulated liveliness which it is fatiguing to watch. Their zest is contagious and the spectator feels responsive to their rhythmic exhilaration.

In the technique of the dance they are excellently trained, and their spirit of camaraderie gives them all equal chances. If one singles out Marie Jeanne, Lew Christensen and Eugene Loring for special commendation, it is because these three seemed to have the elan that promises pre-eminence.

Ravel's somewhat cynical waltzes were probably chosen for the "Promenade" ballet with the idea that they suited the Napoleonic era, but Offenbach would have been better. The sophistication of the music interfered with both the rhythmic emphasis and the melodic line essential to descriptive dancing.

Eugene Loring's choreography for "Yankee Clipper," with its scenes in exotic ports, is ingenious and interesting, but the music does not correspond. Paul Bowles should study the ballet scores of Chaikovski, who may be an old fogey in the eyes of radicals, but who knew how to make lilting melodies to fit the flowing movements of the dance.

The most successful union of music and choreography was in Lew Christensen's "Encounter," neatly fitted to the "Haffner" serenade of Mozart. Here the charm of the music and the grace of its physical embodiment were co-operative.

Director.

Will Jason, who wrote "Penthouse Serenade" and a dozen other song hits, becomes the second composer in the history of motion pictures to be made a director. Victor Schertzinger was the first and he began his career back in the days of silent pictures. Jason has been made a director of short subjects at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Moving.

Allan Jones, featured in the musical, "Everybody Sing," and his wife lived in his portable trailer while the interior of his Brentwood Heights home was being repainted.

Pug-Uglies Given Break in Picture

Beauty may be at a premium in Hollywood, but there's a pretty fair price for ugliness as well.

This was illustrated when 10 men were picked out of 50 applicants for film jobs just because they were the roughest and toughest looking.

The occassion was the casting of a free-for-all-fight that is a comedy highlight of "Love-on Toast," new picture produced by Major Pictures, with E. A. Dupont directing.

The fight, a battle royal, served up as entertainment at a soup sales convention in the film, embroils Stella Ardler and John Payne, leading lady and leading man of the picture.

JEROME FRANK wasn't appointed to that circuit court judgeship in Washington because at the last minute Roosevelt decided he needed him in another spot. That's why Frank will be appointed to the SEC. It will be announced this week . . . Another night club casualty: The Harlem Uproar House, on West Fifty-Second, closed its doors last night . . . He was asked, at the private hearing, whether Marinelli ever had paid him, how many traffic tickets he ever had fixed, and whether he ever had been arrested. Kelly testified with regard to a police record that Marinelli never had paid him, and that he never fixed tickets . . . "Say, Mr. Di Salvio," one of Dewey's assistants asked, "aren't you Jimmy Kelly?" . . . Kelly nodded. The assistant had visited his night club and Kelly had cashed his check . . . "And you're captain of the Twenty-seventh Election District?" he asked . . . Kelly nodded . . . "Mr. Di Salvio," the inquisitor stated, with a cold stare, "shame on you!"

Theaters Offer Bills of Merit For Next Week

Amusement Schedules Are Diversified on Both Stage and Screen.

On Monday evening and throughout next week, in the National Theater, the Messrs. Shubert will present a new English play, "Love of Women," by Aimee and Philip Stuart. The Shuberts have owned the rights to "Love of Women" for two years but have deferred production until a cast suitable to the play could be assembled. That now has been accomplished with Heather Angel, young motion-picture star who was well known on the London stage before arriving in Hollywood, foremost among the principals. Others of note in the cast include Valerie Taylor, also well known on the other side; Hugh Sinclaire, likewise from the London stage; Leo G. Carroll, who has directed the piece; Sayre Crawley, Molly Pearson, Michael Goft, Cathleen Cordell and Iris Whitney. The settings are by Raymond Sovey. There will be the usual matinee performances on Wednesday and Saturday.

William Powell and Myrna Loy, supported by Florence Rice, John Beal, Edgar Kennedy, Jessie Ralph, Katherine Alexander, Bert Roach and many more, will be the pictured stars of "Double Wedding," the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer film comedy, announced as chief screen attraction for the week beginning tomorrow at Loew's Capital Theater. The farce is executed in a spirit of carefree abandon and deals with tangled loves in an auto-trailer and a swanky New York apartment. The stage offering for the new week will be supplied by the "Hollywood Hotel Revue," with Marty May as stellar comedian and master of ceremonies. This is heralded as one of the most pretentious stage productions of recent times and enlists the services of a large group of players.

Washington furnishes the locale of "First Lady," the Warner Brothers' picturization of the stage play by Katherine Dayton and George S. Kaufman, announced as the featured screen attraction at the Earle Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. The roles created on the boards by Jane Cowl and Lily Cahill are portrayed in the film by Kay Francis and Verree Teasdale. The principal male roles are in the capable hands of Preston Foster, Walter Connolly and Henry O'Neill. Anita Louise and Louise Fazenda also are importantly cast. The stage attraction will be Vincent Lopez with his orchestra and considerable group of specialists, including Johnny Morris, Fred Lawery, Bob Lifell, Bab Snell, Johnny Woods, "originator of radio satire," and Nicholas and Roberts, "king and queen of shag."

Hailed as the outstanding musical film production of the year, "The Firefly," co-starring Jeanette MacDonald and Allan Jones, is being held over for a second week at Loew's Palace Theater. Gorgeously mounted and visualizing a romantic adventure story of the secret service during the Napoleonic wars in Spain, the subject also preserves the original Rudolf Friml score, with two new numbers added, the more distinctive of which is the celebrated "Donkey Serenade." The supplementary featurees also are being retained.

China, center of interest of today's headlines, is the locale of "West of Shanghai," the new screen play coming to the Metropolitan Theater for the week beginning tomorrow, with Boris Karloff in the stellar role of Gen. Wu Yen Fong, war lord of a province in the deep interior of China. Ricardo Cortez, Beverly Roberts, Gordon Oliver, Sheila Bromley and Vladimir Sokoloff are prominent in the cast, under the direction of John Farrow. Added short subjects and full newsreel will complete the program.

Katharine Hepburn, Ginger Rogers and Adolphe Menjou head the long cast in the film version of the George S. Kaufman-Edna Ferber stage play of "Stage Door," which will continue its successful engagement on the screen at the RKO-Keith Theater for a second week. The supporting cast, comprised for the greater part of girls, is led by Andrea Leeds, who reveals fine promise as a rising young actress, and also includes Constance Collier, Franklin Pangborn and numerous others. "The March of Time" is the principal auxiliary offering.

Greta Garbo and Charles Boyer, in the roles of Countess Marie Walewska and Napoleon Bonaparte, return to the F street screen today in "Conquest," the story of a love episode in the life of the Little Corsican. The supporting cast is a notable one in which Henry Stephenson, Reginald Owen, Alan Marshall, Leif Erikson, Dame May Whitty, C. Henry Gordon and Madame Ouspenskaya appear in roles of primary interest. The production is one of the most sumptuous of the season.

Violating another of its heretofore fixed policies, the Little Theater, beginning Sunday, will offer a "split week" of film revivals. Sunday through Wednesday, Claude Rains and Heather Angel will be screened in Dickens' "The Mystery of Edwin Drood;" Thursday through Saturday, Robert Donat and Madeleine Carroll will be seen again in the costellar roles of "The 39 Steps," the picture that brought them both into international prominence.

Beginning tomorrow, patrons of the Trans-Lux Theater will be taken on a delightful visit to San Francisco via the screen. A film in natural color will emphasize points of note in and around the City of the Golden Gate. A "stranger-than-fiction" subject will detail a dozen odd facts of life and the bill will be completed by other short-reel releases and newsreel coverage of the world.

On Saturday morning of this week, at 10:30 o'clock, in the Rialto Theater, the Junior Cinema Guild will present the first of 15 programs to be run through the season. The chief screen feature will be "Stormy," a Western animal picture. Its showing will be preceded by a 10-minute program of music by the Boys Harmonica Band of No. 5 Precinct, Boys Club of the Police Department, with songs by the Boys Glee Club Quartet.

Tito Schipa, lyric tenor, star of the Metropolitan Opera, will be seen in the stellar role of an Italian musical film, "L'Amor che Canta"—"My Song of Love"—on the screen of the Rialto Theater at three performances next Monday night. The recent success of "Casta Diva" prompted the booking of this second Italian bill.

Nona "Red" Martin and Dorothy Ahearn lead the feminine contingent in a new burlesque entertainment announced by the Gayety Theater for the week beginning with the usual Sunday matinee performance. The chief comics will be Max Furman and George Murray. A beauty chorus will support the principals.

Tom McCarthy

Interiews Warden Lawes of Sing Sing.

THEY SAID that he was crazy when he let his 6-year-old daughter play with the convicts. They thought it sheer madness for a warden to turn over his car to a criminal, so that the prisoner might go to see his dying mother.

McCARTHY.

"If a prisoner has to see his mother," they said, "he should be strongly guarded. He should have more supervision than an unarmed chauffeur and a warden's wife."

And just a few weeks ago he shocked them again. His wife had died. And the men whom she had mothered—the gunmen and the forgers, the gutter rats and the sluggers — wanted to pay their last respects. They had called her mother.

So Warden Lewis E. Lawes gave his critics something new to talk about. He gave them more fuel for their wrath. He allowed them to resurrect the cry of "coddler of criminals." He let them put him down as simply a "damn fool."

The prisoners had said that they wished to pay their last respects to the warden's wife. To some of them she was the only mother they had ever known. Warden Lawes believed them, and respected their wishes.

His principal keeper walked through Sing Sing's long halls and out through the dormitories. And as he walked an army formed behind him. Gunmen and forgers, fingermen and pennyweighters, they filed from their dormitories and moved without sound through the long gray corridors and out into the sunlit yard.

When the principal keeper reached the main gate it was thrown open. It was thrown open so that an army of 1,000 convicts could march beyond prison walls to pay their last respects to a woman they had loved.

There were as many chances to escape as there were men. But while the little village of Ossining, N. Y., watched breathlessly and the critics of Warden Lawes fumed, the convict army marched quietly up the street and filed before the bier of the woman who had always said, "I have two girls and 2,000 boys."

Then in a wordless quiet the convict army, marching with the slow prison tread, returned, passed through the prison gate and settled down once again to watch the slow passage of the days which would earn them freedom.

• • • •

WARDEN LAWES was in Washington the other day and I asked him about that incident. I asked him how he reacted to his critics.

When I asked him the question we were flying over Washington in the Goodyear blimp. The warden was getting his first glimpse of the Capital from the air. His face had lit up as he spied the Supreme Court building with its white stone roof, and he had called over his shoulder to his secretary, "Hey, look at that, John. That's something to see. I guess we're really seeing things this trip." His enthusiasm was boyish.

But his kindly, mobile face lost its boyish look when I asked the question, and his small hands clenched.

"They've called me a damn fool," he said. "They haven't stopped to figure out that prisoners may also be men. Maybe some people thought I should have had a National Guard regiment to supervise the march of a thousand men beyond prison walls.

"I didn't need an army to supervise those men," Warden Lawes said. "I had an army. I had accepted the pledge of 1,000 men that they would march out in good order and return the same way. Those prisoners respected that pledge. If one of them had sought to betray it, the other 999 would have torn him limb from limb.

"People never think of ex-convicts. They only think of convicts as men in prison. They don't realize that every day hundreds of ex-convicts are streaming back into society. They may be waiting on the respectable folk in their restaurants, or servicing their cars at filling stations. And yet intrinsically those are the same men who once were in prison.

"If you're going to return them to society as normal citizens you've got to start treating them as men. If you treat men like mad dogs for a prison term, you'll return them to society not as men—but as mad dogs."

The warden turned back to the window of the blimp to watch the city below, but his face remained grim.

• • • •

RIDING BACK to Washington with him, I asked him how he developed his present humanitarian philosophy. He came up from the ranks of the guards. And the two summers I spent in the prison town of Dannemora, N. Y., were sufficient to convince me that the life of a guard is not exactly a good base for a humanitarian outlook.

"Oh, I was one of those tough guys, once," Warden Lawes said. "I started in as a guard at Dannemora when I was 21. I carried a big club, and thought I would have to use it.

"But my first lesson came from a man serving a life sentence for murder. I walked into the machine shop with my club, feeling all the ego of 21 years. Then this white haired old lifer came over and very quietly told me that I'd get along much better without the club.

"The old lifer pointed to the convicts working with hammers and steel bars," Warden Lawes said. "He pointed out how many of them there were, as compared with me and my single club. I saw the point. I put away the club. I had to trust them. I learned from a lifer that you can't run even a prison without trust."

IT WAS $100 saved by Mrs. Lawes that enabled him, when he was a guard at Elmira Reformatory, to attend a social science seminar in New York. That planted the seed of his present penal philosophy.

But it was cases like that of "Mike the Rat Catcher" that convinced him of the value of giving a man importance through a job, and trust.

"Mike was incorrigible," Warden Lawes said. "Psychiatrists said that he would be always getting into trouble. There was no hope for him. But Mike did like animals, even rats. That's how he got his name.

"I put him working in the horse barn. And though he'd never worked with horses before, he did wonders with those. He developed pride in his job, and his greatest offense after that was in stealing fodder for his favorite horses.

"Though Mike had formented prison riots and had been a ring leader at every sort of devilment, that job did for him what psychologists said couldn't be done.

"Mike went out, became a teamster, married, went to the war and came back a noncommissioned officer. Today he's a respected citizen with a family.

"When my wife died a few weeks ago, Mike came up to see me. He wanted to know if he couldn't help me out at a time when I needed it."

NLRB Charges Unfair Tactics In Ford Plant

Hearing in St. Louis Case Set for Dec. 16; Manager in Denial.

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Dec. 1.—Miss Dorothea de Schweinitz, National Labor Relations Board regional director, today issued a complaint citing the Ford Motor Co. to answer allegations of unfair labor practices in dealing with the employes of its St. Louis assembly plant, where a strike is on.

The company was given five days to answer. Hearings was set for December 16. The charges were made by the C. I. O. Union October 25.

Milton N. Johnson, plant manager, denied the charges. He said the company bargained collectively with its employes but did not recognize the authority of union leaders who, he contended, did not represent a majority of the workers.

The plant continued in operation today while pickets marched in front of the building.

William Kimberlin, president of the U. A. W. A.'s Ford local, disputed Johnson's claim more than 600 employs manned the assembly lines. He said "less than half that number" were in the plant.

Kimberling was one of 76 union members whom the labor board's complaint said the company had discharged, laid off or refused to rehire after a recent seasonal shutdown.

The complaint also charged that the company threatened and intimidated its employes, forced them to sign statements they were satisfied with working conditions, circulated anti-union propaganda, discouraged employes in the right to form independent labor organizations, and fostered and financed the "Ford service workers" and the "Ford loyalty group."

'Witnesses' Sect Wins Salute Fight

Philadelphia, Dec. 1 (U.P.).—Children whose religious beliefs forbid them to salute the American flag cannot be expelled from public school for not doing so, Federal Judge Albert B. Marks ruled late today in the case of two members of "Jehovah's Witnesses" expelled from a Minersville, Pa., school two years ago.

Georgetown Professor Honored at Luncheon

Dr. Bernard Mayo, professor of history at Georgetown University, was guest of honor at a luncheon given yesterday at the Cosmos Club by Dr. Charles Pergler, dean of National University Law School.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah; Dr. James Brown Scott, director of the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace; Dean E. L. Kayser, of George Washington University, and Dr. E. S. Griffith, dean of the Graduate School of American University, were among the guests.

In HOLLYWOOD With Jimmy Fiddler

Hollywood, Dec. 1. — Settin' Around: (RKO-Radio Pictures): Whenever a Hollywood producer runs into financial losses on his super-supers, he invariably heeds Horace Greeley's advice, "To Go West Young Man." Here at RKO the powers that be are busy heeding it just now. Western sets are being built, bandy-legged cowhands are swaggering about the lot and soon the six-guns will be popping on a new series of "horse operas."

TOM MIX

• • • •

Westerns were the first screen hits, way back yonder in the days of Broncho Billy Anderson. Ever since then, the screen's most consistent money winners have been the cowboy stars—W. S. Hart, Art Acord, Hoot Gibson, Tom Mix, Fred Thompson, Buck Jones, George O'Brien, Ken Maynard. Here in Hollywood, most people have a very uppity attitude about cowboy classics. The theaters along the Boulevard bill the superepics, never the action operas. Ask the average motion picturite to name the screen's great stars and he will completely overlook Buck Jones, Ken Maynard, and the other knights of the saddle. And yet the studios keep on producing the old formula Westerns in order to pay off their losses on the million-dollar "art" specials.

On the "Bringing Up Baby" set, I heard a revealing anecdote about Katharine Hepburn. Seems Katty was sitting unobtrusively in the shadows when she heard an electrician panning the scene she had just finished. After ripping it to shreds, he proceeded to explain how it should have been shot. Katty took it all in and then stepped out of the shadows. And while the poor electrician trembed she seized him by the arm and swept up to the throne of Director Howard Hawks. "Here," said she, "is a critic with some sense." She turned to the jittery workman. "Tell Mr. Hawks about it," she ordered. He obeyed—and the scene was reshot with an electrician acting as author and director.

George McGonigle, the property man working on "Easy Millions," is a character. In a business where waste is the order of the day, he is a conservationist. He guards his "props" as though they were precious jewels and goes temperamental when they are destroyed. Today, I watched Sally Eilers and Preston Foster play a scene in which she lost her temper, gathered up the dinner dishes and hurled them out the window. Poor McGonigle! A first take, a second, and a third failed to satisfy the director—and with each succeeding crash of broken crockery, he suffered new agonies. Gloomingly he set the table for another take. Sally hurled the dishes out the window the fourth time. "Cut," ordered the director, "that take was perfect!" McGonigle, ruefully appraising the breakage, interrupted. "Better shoot it again," said he, with withering sarcasm. "There are two plates here that weren't broken."

Judge this Fine Whisky by its Vigor and Taste

When Brown-Forman began distilling its famous Kentucky whiskies—67 years ago—it selected the slowest and most costly way that whisky can be produced.

This way—the "Brown-Forman way"—demands more time—and far more grain per gallon. But that's exactly why Brown-Forman whiskies have been great whiskies—distinguished for their vigor, their smoothness and their robust flavor.

Bottoms Up gives you one of these great Brown-Forman whiskies made in the slow and costly way.

For vigor — for smoothness — for rich full-bodied flavor—we don't believe you'll find any finer whisky than Bottoms Up. Try at least a half-pint.

YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!

Overweight Is Called Serious Menace to Longevity.

By Ida Jean Kain.

IF YOU KEEP your weight down after 40 you not only look younger, but you live longer . . . and statistics prove it.

In a study of 300,000 policy holders, a relatively high mortality rate was found to prevail among women who were overweight. Dr. Louis I. Dublin, statistician for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., declares "The penalty of overweight becomes more pronounced with age. After 40, women who are moderately underweight live the longest."

The weight tendency of the average woman is in direct contradiction to the laws of health and longevity. Instead of maintaining normal weight or, as recommended, a weight that is slightly under the accepted average after the age of 30, she continues to take on excess pounds.

Average Gain Listed.

According to Dr. Dublin's figures, the average gain is 3 pounds between the ages of 25 and 35; 7 between 30 and 40, and 6 pounds between 40 and 50. If your weight increase is only average you will be 16 pounds overweight by the time you are 50. Unfortunately, this probable increase is an understatement since the excessive overweight is not included in these figures.

It is difficult to tell what your normal weight should be. Even the weight charts allow for a gradual increase as you grow older. Do not overlook the fact, however, that these charts are based on average weights and not on normal weight for the individual.

If your build varies from the normal there still is another possibility of error in calculating your normal weight. The charts do not make any allowance for variation in structure. In general, the stocky individual with the broad chest and comparatively short legs should not weigh less than stipulated by the charts, while the slender girl with narrow chest and slight structure could be obese if she conformed to the average given for her height. Structure as well as height should be the basis for computing normal weight.

Good Rule Outlined.

Here is a good rule based on structure and height to be used in determining your normal weight: If you are very small-boned, allow 100 pounds for 5 feet of height. If you have a medium-size frame, allow 105 pounds, and if your frame is large, allow 110 pounds for the first 5 feet of height. Add 5½ pounds for each inch by which your height exceeds 5 feet.

Normal weight for the girl 5 feet 5 inches can vary from 122 pounds to 132 pounds in accordance with her structure. The weight charts would have the small, stocky or large girl of a given height weigh the same, and, furthermore, there is an allowance for a weight gain as the person grows older. Adopt a health program that will bring your weight to normal for your height and structure. Keep slim after 40.

Cotton Lace Tops Resort and Spring Fabrics

NEW WEAVES, coloring technique and patterns distinguish the cotton lace daytime costumes for resort wear, cruises and spring. The jacket-blouse frock (left) in Renaissance pattern is youthful, yet suitable for the mature figure. Note the scalloped edges which outline the collar, sleeves, front closing and peplum. The glass buttons and corded belt are in bright, contrasting color tones. Below is a simple one-piece frock also of cotton lace; two-tone suede makes the belt and the buttons down the front repeat one of these shades. Both frocks are available in seven different colors.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Always Seeking, Yet Ever Denied, Bosom Friendship With Another Woman, Spinster Asks Advice.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am an unmarried woman in the forties. Having been very active for a period of years in an organization of some 500 members, I have a goodly number of casual friends and 15 to 20 close friends, some of whom I consider quite wonderful. When I balance my good and bad points, I wonder how anyone could care for me, and yet all my life I have craved one really close friendship of the David-and-Jonathan variety. I see such friendships in other lives, but there is something vital lacking in me, apparently, for I have never been able to form such an association.

• • • •

I have lost two women friends whom I had hoped would become the other half of such a relationship. Each time, the person left me to enter into just such a friendship with another woman. I got through the first time of desolation by doing for others and making myself forget my own grief, but this latest loss leaves me with the feeling I have nothing left to offer anyone.

• • • •

I have gotten past the sleepless nights, for the most part, and my regular employment keeps my mind occupied during the daytime. I think I know what I should do, but making myself do it seems to be something else again. To appreciate so fully what I do have that I have no time to think about wanting something else would settle the matter, of course. I am wondering what advice you have to give to a person like me. Thanks for your patience. SIMPLETON.

• • • •

The Better Sublimation.

DEAR SIMPLETON: It appears to me you lean too heavily on the staff of friendship, expecting it to serve you in place of wholesome self-reliance, for one thing; and in lieu of married companionship, for another thing. You probably visualize an intimate friendship as one which guarantees your never being alone evenings and holidays; as providing an invariable companion with whom to go places and do things; whose ear you can claim for confidences at any hour of the day or evening—who leans on you as possessively as you lean upon her.

• • • •

In those relationships which eventually were broken off, I can imagine you were too emotional, too sentimental, a bit too jealous of your erstwhile friends' responsiveness to other acquaintances' claims upon their time and sympathies. Association with you became a binding—and hence irksome—obligation, instead of the voluntary pleasure it must be if it is to bloom fully and live long. I can imagine that one of your old friends, in explaining the discontinuance of her association with you, might say: "Jane is so queer. You would think she owned me. She was hurt if I didn't see her every day; if I didn't consult her before I made a social engagement of any kind. She seemed to think we were married to each other; that neither could take a step without the other at her side."

• • • •

She might say, too, "I was very fond of her; simply devoted to her, at first. But naturally I couldn't give up everything and everybody for her. And she takes things so seriously. I think people who take things too seriously are such bores, don't you? Oh, I feel sorry for her, in a way; she seems morbid, or neurotic, or something, but that kind of association drags me down. I like to associate with people who let you call your soul your own, if you know what I mean. So I just decided the less we saw of each other, the better it would be for both concerned."

• • • •

The best advice I can give you is to realize the wealth of friendship that is already yours in having "15 to 20 close friends" and "a goodly number of casual friends;" and to stop, once and for all, trying to find a soulmate and constant companion in the personality and being of some other woman. If you hope for that kind of companionship, look for it with the opposite sex. Never mind the fact that you are unmarried and in the forties. Marriage or masculine companionship may still be yours, if you concentrate on the opposite sex with all the ardor you have wasted in vain on your own sex.

• • • •

Instead of trying for an all-sufficing friendship with any one woman, it will be far better for your social development to work for boon companionship with three or four congenial spirits. In that way, none becomes too important; and when one is busy, another is apt to be free or engaged in plans which can be extended to include you. Never become so engrossed in old friendships that you neglect to extend the welcoming word to a newcomer to a group, in office or in one's purely social sphere. Fine friendships often grow out of one person's true thoughtfulness to another who comes strange and shy to a new environment.

• • • •

Your yearning for a woman friend is a polite disguise for your yearning for reciprocal heterosexual love, I imagine. It's poor compensation at best. The better sublimation will be found in richly varied social activity, of a kind which exercises all your energies, mental, emotional and physical. You need hobbies, on which to lavish enthusiasm; sports, through which to derive pleasure and exercise; study, for disciplining and engrossing the mind, which otherwise torments itself with inward-turning thoughts; and you need as many casual friends as you can possibly acquire. Also, you need an objective goal in life. Becoming president of an important club say; or becoming executive of the department in which you work; or becoming the most popular hostess in your group; or getting married to some eligible man who has caught your fancy. Anything at all which will keep you pressing forward to the future, perfecting yourself as you focus all your abilities on achieving that one goal. With your personality expressing itself in an out-going, up-reaching way, you will no longer brood passively over the petty lack of one closer-than-a-sister woman friend.

Cotton Lace Called a 'Natural' As Part of Wardrobe for Cruise

Fabric Destined to Become Leader in Fashions Next Spring and Summer; Styling Determines Formality of Costume.

The following article is one of a series on cruise and resort styles, with special reference to their influence on spring fashions.

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post Fashion Editor.

FOR wintering in the South or as part of a cruise wardrobe, cotton lace is a "natural." Since the resort collections give more than a hint of what to expect in fashions next spring and summer, lace is destined to be one of the leading fabrics—according to these previews. For the neutral tones and those of dark colors, glistening glass buttons and cord or grosgrain ribbon belts lend smart contrast and interesting color accents. Various types of accessories harmonize smartly with cotton laces; for instance the hat to accompany a costume of this fabric may be felt, straw or any of the popular silks. The same is true of gloves, shoes and handbags.

From a practical point of view, cotton lace is a good purchase; it is not exorbitant in price, launders well and does not wrinkle easily. It is one of the most satisfactory of materials for packing—it usually can be rolled into a ball and stuck in one corner of the traveling bag and, when placed on a hanger later, will be wrinkle-free. Among the cruise and resort colors interpreted in cotton lace this season, are natural, flesh, aqua, white, navy, cinnamon and cherry red.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, Dec. 1.

AMONG THE most interesting speakers at our recent Book Fair, where scores of real, live authors talked and walked among us as mortal men and women, was the almost legendary Mrs. Emily Post of etiquette fame. This handsome and gracious figure, who has made a comfortable young fortune out of her various editions, is more of a victim, these days, than a dictator.

ALICE HUGHES

But Mrs. Emily is no die-hard for the rules of yesterday—she grows and changes with the times. She has to. As she said in her oration before the fair, "Instead of teaching my young readers the conventions nowadays, I find I have to adapt the conventions to my young readers! . . . I wish somebody else were still making the rules so I would simply have to tell what they were. But the fact is that I am now confronted with the necessity of making the rules!"

And the truth is that Mrs. Post simply can't confine herself to the old handbook of proper behavior. She has taken the New Freedom of the Young with good will and a sense of humor. Instead of weeping over the disappearance of the demon chaperone, the old-time gorgon of society, she chuckles at the new problems her disappearance has caused:

Take the matter of a young lady's dining at a bachelor's apartment. A few decades ago such a question would have called out the militia, or at least a lunacy commission. Now Mrs. Post, however frightful the consequences may be, is strongly tempted to say, "Why, certainly!" She has realized, too, that in the business world men and women meet and compete as equals, and that perhaps the lady should pick up the luncheon check, or at least her half of it. All very puzzling and confusing.

But Mrs. E. Post never has weakened in the face of changes. She refuses to date by clinging to outworn rules and regulations. More power to her!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Dr. Sarah Parker White, author of the recently published "Moral History of Women," is a voice crying in our wilderness. She is against the cocktail for our sex, and says so in no uncertain terms. The good doctor, who neither smokes nor drinks, states her attitude thus—"Cocktails have complicated more than one illicit relationship between man and woman. When alcohol is imbibed, there invariably follows some abandonment of those defenses and precautions which a woman must keep in mind if she is to keep out of trouble." True, doctor, how true! But, alas, the local cocktail lounges are filled each afternoon with ladies undergoing the abandonment of a few defenses!

• • • •

Good shows are now beginning to turn up, at long last, as the man said: "The 'Ghost of Yankee Doodle" brought back the retired Ethel Barrymore, and the lady took 15 curtain calls—and deserved ones. Then came "Of Mice and Men," dramatized from Mr. Steinbeck's novel by Mr. Steinbeck. The only lady in the troupe is Miss Claire Luce, the blonde cutie now turned dramatic actress in a very big way.

• • • •

I saw Kitty Carlisle of stage and movies at that opening—a terrific picture in a startling vermilion gown tricked out with gold accessories. The material was silk jersey, and her hat was a towering gold turban trimmed with black aigrettes. Kitty was a blazing sight, to be sure!

Diamond bracelets and other arm gew-gaws are getting their greatest breaks in years this season, owing to the prevalence of short coat and dress sleeves at present. In other words, if we have 'em we can wear 'em—and they'll be seen. If not—well, we're no worse off than we were in long sleeves.

1938 D. C. Social Register Contains Fewer Pages

Book Listing Socially Elite Appears to Have Been Hit by Recession; Several Names Added to New Issue.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Whether the economic recession has hit Capital social circles or the city's elite layer has become even more exclusive, I don't know—but the 1938 Social Register of Washington, which landed on my desk yesterday, is three pages thinner than its immediate predecessor.

HOPE R. MILLER.

That, despite the fact that there are included several names not appearing before in the Capital's "little black book of the blue bloods."

When you take into consideration that the register automatically lists the President, the Vice President, the Supreme Court, the Diplomatic Corps, the Cabinet and Senators, it would seem there would be few pages left for private citizens. But the fact is, two-thirds of this year's slim register is filled with names that have no official connections.

The Capital City apparently does not wait with bated breath each season, as does New York, to discover whose names have been omitted and whose added. "Once in, you're always in—until you die," was the way a cave-dweller expressed it recently. "Even Reno no longer means removal."

Probably more misconceptions have arisen regarding the Register than any other compilation on record. But despite rumors that have gone the rounds, names are never solicited and no one who makes the grade, with the exception of those in the "automatic class," does so without filing personal application and submitting credentials.

Recently, looking through some early issues of The Washington Post, I discovered that Washington had a social directory of sorts back in 1886. A couple of years later, a slim volume called "The Elite List" appeared. The Social Register as it is now published for several cities had its root in a book published in New York in 1887 under the aegis of Louis Keller, who later expanded the project to take in a wider range.

The earliest Social Register of Washington to be found in the Library of Congress came out in 1900 and filled 100 pages. The present volume is almost twice as big.

Among names recently added, or rather shifted to Washington from other cities, are those of Mr. and Mrs. James Roosevelt, Mr. and Mrs. Snowden Fahnestock, the Macneil of Barra and Mrs. Robert Lister Macneil and their children—to mention but a few.

For the first time, so far as I can discover, a duPont appears in the Washington book—Ethel duPont, of course, who married Franklin D. Roosevelt. She and her husband appear in both the New York and Washington registers, their address being given in the former. Only one Roosevelt son, John, is listed at the White House.

A number of other names, not included before, are in this issue as the result of recent marriage. One I noticed particularly was that of James P. Bowie, the husband of the former Catrina Beale.

* * * *

OF PERSONAL NOTE: Count and Countess Adelbert de Chambrun, who arrived in this country from Paris early last month and have been visiting Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, in Cincinnati, will arrive in Washington Saturday to spend several days. Countess de Chambrun, the former Clara Longworth, sister of the late Nicholas Longworth, expects to do some research at the Folger Library during her stay. She is an authority on Shakespeare . . . Baron and Baroness Serge Korff left yesterday for Swarthmore, Pa., where Baron Korff will spend some time at Swarthmore College, having been lent to that school by the Carnegie Institute . . . The Duchess of Westminster, who recently was widely wined and dined in Washington, seems to be taking New York by storm. What she wears, where she goes and with whom she is seen are faithfully recorded in Gotham newspapers. Latest report is, she and Capt. and Mrs. Hugh Kellett, who accompanied her to the Capital, will entertain at a swank supper dance at Hampshire House December 13. Two days later, the Kelletts will sail for England. The Duchess, who will continue her visit in America for several weeks, is planning a trip to Florida, and may return for another brief visit to Washington.

About the Town

With Dudley Harmon

DID YOU EVER TRY finding your way to the 3700 block of Thirty-third place from Georgetown? Yesterday we set blithely forth at a quarter to 6 bound for the small cocktail party given by Herr and Frau Blankenhorn of the German Embassy. Our taxi, which wheezed and had a driver who spoke only a few words of English, finally bogged down after a 20-minute hunt in the suburbs of Washington. What to do? There was not another cab in sight. We were about to give up, when, suddenly a truck delivering newspapers hove into view and the driver kindly offered to help. Up and down Macomb and Newark streets we went several times, until the man finally said "There is no such place" and asked us to get off.

DUDLEY HARMON.

By this time we were stubbornly determined to get to the Blankenhorns if it took all winter. So we entered a perfectly strange house and called another taxi. This man, more intelligent than the first, finally drove up to a gas station, got out a map, and brooded over it as though he were planning a military campaign. It was the right approach, however, and about quarter to 7 we found ourselves chez Blankenhorn.

* * * *

THE PARTY was well worth the trouble, as it was most congenial. The Blankenhorn's house looks something like a Hansel and Gretel cottage, tucked away in the woods, and both are perfect hosts.

Among those there were the Charge d'Affaires of the Netherlands Legation and Countess van Rechteren Limpurg, Maj. Heywood, of the British Embassy, who sails tomorrow for leave in England; the Financial Counselor of the Embassy, Noel Trentham, and his attractive bride, who wore a black velvet dress with a white collar; Mr. and Mrs. John Farr Simmons and Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Cumming, of the State Department; the Counselor of the Polish Embassy and Mme. Wankowicz, Mr. and Mrs. Brinkley Smithers, Mrs. Walter White; Miss Rebecca Wellington, Miss Dolly Corbin, the Gerald Walravens, of the Belgian Embassy, and Miss Elizabeth Roberts, daughter of Justice and Mrs. Owen J. Roberts.

* * * *

ODDS AND ENDS: Gen. and Mrs. Louis McC. Little are in Washington at the Anchorage. The General is here on business from San Diego, where he is now stationed. Mrs. Little is leaving tomorrow for a stay in New York and Newport . . . The Financial Counselor of the British Embassy and Mrs. Trentham will entertain at a cocktail party a week from Saturday in the Chinese room of the Mayflower . . . Mr. and Mrs. F. Lammot Belin are again at their home in Georgetown after a trip to Europe.

U. S. Envoys Lead Tide of Travelers Back to Europe

For a while it looked as if everybody were sailing back to the United States for a change instead of sailing to Europe. That was when summer vacations were on the wane and members of society who hadn't seen America since early in the summer began to yearn for New York and other points of the compass west, south, east and north in our fair land.

But at latest reports, the trend is all the other way. As a matter of fact when the Queen Mary, unruffled by her bumptious arrival in New York the other day when she mangled part of her pier, sailed out of New York Harbor, yesterday, she was full of wandering Americans.

Among them were the two First Secretaries of the United States Embassy in France, H. M. Cochran and Hugh R. Fullerton, who evidently believe there's nothing to equal Paris in December. Along with them went Bertel T. Kuniholm, Second Secretary of the United States Legation at Riga, and Mrs. Kuniholm, who evidently want to get as close to the North Pole as possible, come Christmas.

Other members of the foreign service sailing on the Queen Mary were C. M. P. Cross, American consul at Paris, and R. Borden Reams, the consul at Copenhagen.

One of the Atlantic's constant commuters also was on the Queen Mary, namely Lady Furness, who gets back and forth more than anyone else on record.

Also on the passenger list was Mrs. Ogden Mills, who has closed her house for the winter and will not return to this country until spring.

Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, who returned recently from Russia and the Orient, will speak Saturday at a luncheon sponsored by the Washington branch of the American Association of University Women. Child Care Bulletins Aid U.S. Mothers

Foreign Service Wives Appreciate Children's Bureau Service.

Laud Director Katherine Lenroot at Luncheon at Admiral Club.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Women whose husbands are in the United States Foreign Service, stationed in remote places, depend on the child care bulletins of the Children's Bureau just as do the women in isolated rural districts in this country, for whom they are prepared, Miss Katharine Lenroot, director of the Children's Bureau, learned yesterday. Miss Lenroot, the first of the speakers to address the Foreign Service Women at their monthly luncheons this season, found herself the center of a deluge of expressions of appreciation for the bulletins from those who had used them for guidance in caring for their children during residence in distant countries.

The luncheon, at which Mrs. Cordell Hull, wife of the Secretary of State, was guest of honor, was given at the Admiral Club, and Miss Lenroot's talk on "Women in Government" was followed by an informal discussion over the coffee cups.

Clara Barton was the first woman in Government service in Washington, she said, although Jennie Douglas is generally credited with this distinction. Miss Barton had a clerical postion, which she filled for only a short time, and shortly after her, Jennie Douglas began work as a clerk clipping currency.

Miss Lenroot entered the Children's Bureau less than three years after it was established in 1912, with Julia C. Lathrop as its chief. She took a civil service examination and was appointed a special agent at a salary of $1,200 a year. She took the place under the first woman chief of a Government bureau and now serves as the bureau's head under the first woman Cabinet officer—Frances Perkins, Secretary of Labor.

There were only a few women in Government service in the early days of the Bureau and they met at monthly dinners to talk over their common problems, she said. Among those in the group were Mary Anderson, of the Women's Bureau; Dr. Louise Stanley, of the Bureau of Home Economics; Mrs. Gardner, former civil service commissioner; Mabel Walker Willebrandt, Maj. Julia Stimson, of the Army Nurse Corps; Miss Bowman, of the Navy Corps, and Miss Lucy Minnegerode, who was head of the Public Health Nursing Service.

Harriet Taylor Upton often came to their meetings when she was vice chairman of the Republican National Committee, said Miss Lenroot, and always urged them to keep their work up to such a standard that none but able women would ever be appointed to Government positions.

Contrasting the number in Government work then and now, Miss Lenroot pointed out that there were eventually so many that the dinner meetings were abandoned and that now when all the women executives are invited to the White House it is usually to a garden party so there will be room for everybody.

Miss Lenroot's talk was the first in a series the Foreign Service Women will have this winter on "Women in Government." The monthly luncheons have been held regularly for about five years chiefly to provide opportunity for those who are in Washington on leave to meet friends who are now residing here. There is no formal organization. The group meets by common consent and the luncheons are occasions on which there is no rank nor order of precedence observed. Mrs. John Carter Vincent introduced Miss Lenroot yesterday.

Among the guests were Mrs. James Clement Dunn, Mrs. Alfred S. Johnson, wife of Admiral Johnson, whose two daughters are married to foreign service men and who thus qualifies as a "foreign service mother;" Miss Cornelia Bassel, of the State Department; Mrs. Maynard Barnes, whose husband has recently been ordered to Paris; Mrs. Hugh Cumming, jr., and Mrs. Edward S. Trueblood.

* * * *

The wives of officers of the American Red Cross, who comprise the membership of the ROWAC Club, also held a luncheon meeting yesterday, with Mrs. Edward H. Cavin as hostess. It was a Christmas party, at which each member brought a gift marked for a boy or girl of a certain age, to be taken by Mrs. Cary T. Grayson, welfare chairman, to little patients at Children's Hospital.

Christmas decorations and cheerful, crackling fires in the fireplaces in each room provided a setting for the holiday observance. The 42 guests were served a buffet luncheon, as is customary at the ROWAC meetings, and were seated at small tables. They played bridge during the afternoon, but instead of having prizes for high score the club used the money which would have been spent for them to buy gifts for the children in the hospital.

Mrs. William Hepner, the club president, was among the guests.

Dr. Call Gives Peace Talk Before Sodality Group

Dr. Arthur Deerin Call, secretary of the American Peace Society and editor of "World Affairs," addressed the members of the Sanctuary Sodality of Blessed Sacrament Church at their monthly meeting yesterday. His subject was "Along the Road to World Peace."

The members of this group hold a luncheon and business meeting monthly, with about 150 attending.

Mrs. Murray Boocock, the national president, will be a guest, and Mrs. J. Winston Johns, who heads the division, will preside.

SENATOR DIXIE BIBB GRAVES was guest of honor last night at the Alabama State Society's dance at the Raleigh Hotel. She wore a raisin-colored velvet gown and her usual smile as she was greeted by her fellow Alabamans. She was on the program for a talk and made a brief, informal one, which was received with rounds of enthusiastic applause.

The drama has been given there annually since the players were organized.

Stengle on Decentralization.

Anent the proposed decentralization of the Social Security Auditing Branch of Internal Revenue, now impending, Col. Charles I. Stengle of the A. F. G. E. has certain opinions, which he has forwarded in a letter form to Internal Revenue Commissioner Helvering:

First, he looks at the proposal to transfer to field offices a large number of auditors now working at 1331 U street northwest, and the plan to employ these auditors in the field service under the title of deputy collectors of internal revenue.

"Of course there are times when decentralization is both wise and practical. This may be one of those times in this particular case, but we can see no reason for changing the title of civil service employes to titles which are recognized throughout the country as more or less political and therefore without the pale of civil service protection," he wrote.

He believed the commissioner to be very much interested in the President's program to extend the merit system upward and downward and outward, and felt quite certain that by calling "your attention to this situation I may be able to have you see the matter as we do and have you insist upon the continuance of civil service titles and classifications to all decentralized employes in the (SSB) Auditing Bureau."

"No harm can come from such a decision on your part but great good would be accomplished in that the morale of your force, after it is transferred, would remain high. These employes enjoy a civil service status today and are certainly entitled to enjoy it after they are decentralized even though the location of their work be changed," he said.

Notes.

Dr. Thomas Parran, surgeon general of the Public Health Service, comes out in favor of the labor movement. He said at a recent meeting of Public Health Service Lodge, No. 41, A. F. G. E., "The labor movement and the health movement are closely allied, for improvement in living and working conditions contributes to the health of the country." Dr. Parran, therefore, may have been pleased when Rozella G. Robey, the lodge president, rose to announce an increase of the membership to 300 . . . Roy M. North, Acting Third Assistant Postmaster General, has returtned from Puerto Rico, where it is warm, to Washington, where it is cold. He was down there to oversee a first-day sale of stamps, and left behind him Robert C. King, assistant superintendent, Division of Stamps, and Roy Sheridan, who, lucky boys, continue the expedition to the Virgin Islands to oversee another first-day sale of stamps . . . Mrs. Mary T. Walter left the service when the month closed. She was a draftsman in the forest service, and had served the Government 27 years, 10 months . . . The Census Bureau Recreational Group sponsors a fall party Saturday night in the Commerce Building Auditorium. There will be cards, dancing and community singing; cards of admission may be secured from Census employes.

Lecture.

A meeting of the Association of Nonclassified Federal Employes will be held in the auditorium, old Interior Building, tonight. Thomas C. Ramsey, the president, writes in: "An instructive lecture will be given at each meeting of the association, the first of these by Col. A. B. Sowell, of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, a former editor, lecturer and world traveler, who will discuss civil service questions." Another speaker will be Arthur Clarendon Smith, and Arthur W. Watwood, whose topic will be "Proposed Legislation as it Affects Government Employes." The aim of this organization is to have legislation enacted providing for all nonclassified Federal workers to take noncompetitive examinations.

Speeches.

The top employe meeting tonight will be held in Hitchcock Hall, St. Elizabeths Hospital, when Lodge 28 (A. F. G. E.) introduces such speakers as Representatives Robert Ramspeck, William T. Shulte, Glen Griswold, Jennings Randolph, John W. McCormack, Senator Ellender (there's favoritism afoot), and possibly Secretary Ickes. Dr. Winefred Overholzer, St. Elizabeths superintendent, will be the honor guest. Col. Charles I. Stengle and a delegation from the national office will be on the platform. Several prominent attorneys have been invited and may have words to say. E. P. Freeman, an A. F. of L. organizer, will be there and probably speak. (Altogether, it seems as though we will be there all night.) The committee in charge consists of Harry F. Rader, the lodge president; Miss Mary R. Copsey, recording secretary; Frank H. Maxey, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. Bessie Van Word, Mrs. Florence Harmon, Mrs. Mabel Barrett, Felix Copsey, Judson Anderson, Mark Bowsher, Lloyd White, Mrs. Margaret Kelly, Mrs. Carrie Brooks, Mrs. Myrtle Spudis, Samuel J. Parrish, Roscoe O'Flaherty, Alex Grimes, Sidney Fowler, Benson Taylor, jr., David Landman and Arthur Reynolds . . . The Agriculture Players repeat again tonight on the auditorium stage; their offering consists of three one-act plays; there is no admission charge.

Also under indictment and awaiting trial are Thomas Henry Hook, 38-year-old former Washington policeman, and Frank Guy, colored.

Harlan MILLER Over the Coffee

Flattery reaches its lushest flowering in the caviar circles of the Capital . . . Praise here is a fine art, and the hand-painted compliment, complete with curlyeues, is legal tender for the repayment of social obligations and the interchange of diplomatic courtesies.

* * * *

Washington flattery is rooted in the theory that no one is so hopelessly homely or repulsive as to be without something on which a compliment can be hung . . .

* * * *

Or, as an Italian diplomat here expresses it, with a smooth tongue you can convince a hunchback that no one ever thinks of him except as that chap with the extraordinarily beautiful hands.

"—a Capital compliment"

Thus, when Elmer Gulliver, from the prairies, goes to a fancy Washington party, he may find himself, with a surge of local pride, in a gathering reminiscent of the sort of people, who in the Middle West only, come out of retirement to go to the larger funerals.

* * * *

But, from the snatches of conversations he overhears around him, he will quickly realize that everyone is agog and dizzy with the charm and loveliness of everyone else . . . And this impression will be confirmed by the accounts of the social savants he reads in the papers next day.

* * * *

Yvone de Pomme de Terre has the world's handsomest elbows . . . No one serves beer and pretzels of such distinction as the Baron von Kuhfuss . . . Senator Keenphix would be such a Don Juan if his mother hadn't told him it was naughty.

* * * *

Mrs. DePuyster Grimm's daughter has been getting such good marks in arithmetic at Vassar . . . Suzie Koo, daughter of the Minister from Graustark, has the most magnificent eyebrows; better concentrate on them . . . Despite his hectic dashes from party to party Count Eleutherios Davidoff finds time to embroider a simply ravishing doily now and then, the dawg.

* * * *

I'm afraid I haven't been here long enough to master the technique, but I can try . . . Dear old Athelstan Briggs' booming laugh makes people drop their tea cups . . . No cocktail party is complete without the svelte (tall and lanky) Hon. Vyvyan Paycock and her adorable chinchilla muff . . . Why does the popcorn of the DeWitt Snaggles always taste like ambrosia?

"—such pretzels of such distinction"

Dog-gone it, here I am trying to cover up my hinterland awe with wisecracks . . . Actually, it's no trivial social grace to discover that deep in Madame Facade's weather-beaten old face twinkle a truly remarkable pair of periwinkle eyes, and that Carmencita O'Malley's is the most enchanting drawl that ever came out of Michigan.

* * * *

Once you have mastered the formula, you'll find that the most difficult thing of all is to pay a compliment to a truly bewitching female . . . You'll find yourself ignoring her more obvious splendors and focusing on her too, too cunning ear lobes or that marvelous brooch her uncle brought her from Bagdad . . . With her many distractions, and all the demands on his time, how do the Oscar Pumpernickels find time to go to a cocktail party, when they have six other cocktail parties to attend?

* * * *

All right, you can wisecrack all you want to, but praise, flattery and compliments are a precious and exhilarating form of white lie or vocal artistry . . . At your next party, pick out the ten most alarming old gargoyles you can find and pay each one a delicate, particularized compliment . . . Maybe the State Department will want you in its division of protocol.

U. S. to Make Investigation At Gallinger

To Include All Public Health Facilities of District.

By Gerald G. Gross

A comprehensive and thoroughgoing investigation of Gallinger Hospital in the near future was assured yesterday when the U. S. Public Health Service responded favorably to Commissioner George E. Allen's request for such a survey.

The study will cover not only the municipal hospital but the Capital's entire public health establishment, The Post was told by Surgeon General Thomas Parran. Dr. Parran said the survey would be taken up where the Preble report of 1929 left off.

Major recommendations of that report, based upon an investigation conducted by the Public Health Service at the request of the now defunct Bureau of Efficiency, have never been carried out.

Points of Criticism.

Richard MacKenzie, New York hospital consultant, recently made a brief study of general conditions at Gallinger for the Bureau of the Budget. It consumed only three or four days and was informal in character. Among the points of criticism which it did not delve into thoroughly were:

1. The problem of handling nonresident patients, most of whom cannot or will not pay for services despite the fact that Gallinger Hospital is supposed to care for District citizens only, except in true emergencies.

2. The problem, which contributes to the institution's housing and economic burden, of accommodating patients who are "recommended" for admittance by members of Congress or other high officials, whether or not the patients are eligible for care at the expense of District taxpayers.

3. The problem caused by the free treatment of persons who could pay for hospitalization and medical service but who, because Gallinger has no adequate social service department, are able to "sponge" upon facilities supposedly reserved for the indigent.

4. The food served—its cost, nutritional value, preparation, service, etc. A ranking member of the hospital's resident staff told the writer that the fare served the doctors was "lousy." A member of the visiting staff of physicians charged that "it is impossible to obtain special diets or articles of diet."

5. The layout, as well as the physical condition, of Gallinger's 36 buildings, some of which are approximately a mile apart. Women doctors on the resident staff, for example, live in a dilapidated cottage nearly half a mile from the medical-surgical building in which they work.

Only Few of Factors.

6. The ratio of nurses to patients, which is far below standard.

7. Welfare of the nursing staff, students and graduates, including determination of whatever relationship may exist between their grueling routine and the excessive number of tuberculosis cases which occur among them.

8. The question of equipment, instruments and supplies, whether of not they are adequate.

9. The standards of the nursing service, whether or not this indispensable branch of the hospital is fulfilling its obligations to the patient, the doctor, the municipality and the nursing profession.

The aforementioned points are but a few of the factors which either were wholly untouched in the MacKenzie study, due to its brevity, or else merely commented upon in general terms. The Post learned yesterday upon unquestioned authority.

Dr. George C. Ruhland, District health officer, did not know that Commissioner Allen had requested a general survey of the Public Health Service until several hours afterward.

Ruhland Welcomes Study.

(As part of its policy, the United States Public Health Service and its investigative facilities are available always to health officers throughout the country who request that a survey be made in their jurisdictions. The Federal bureau does not, however, take the initiative in such matters.)

Last night the Surgeon General said actual launching of the study would await a written invitation from the Commissioners. Dr. Ruhland, informed later of the request and the favorable response, said he welcomed the investigation.

The investigation, Dr. Parran said, will encompass every phase of the Health Department's activities, including public health education, hospitals and tuberculosis sanatoria, maternal and infant hygiene, laboratories, vital statistics, etc., as well as control of the more important communicable diseases such as syphilis, tuberculosis and diphtheria.

Chest Workers Press Onward Toward Quota

Units Move From Hotel to Permanent Quarters on M Street.

Pledged to carry on until they have attained their quota of $2,059,000, Community Chest campaign workers returned to their labors yesterday.

Final figures received last night from the Chest audit unit, meanwhile, made little change in the figures announced at the final report meeting, held Tuesday at the Willard Hotel. Official figures were 179,383 pledges, amounting to $1,832,478.60, more than $275,000 short of the minimum set as necessary to maintain activities of the 89 agencies suported by the Chest for the coming year.

Move to M Street.

All Chest units yesterday moved from the Willard to their permanent quarters at 1101 M street northwest. Officially, these units were disbanded, but a number of groups were carrying on a campaign for increased gifts or seeing persons not reached previously.

Herbert L. Willett, jr., director of the Chest, explained that additional pledges would be just as welcome as cash.

"If any person who has already given wishes to make an additional gift," said Willett, "that person can either increase the pledge already made or make an additional pledge, to be paid throughout the year on the same basis as the original pledge."

32 Campaigns Pressed.

Late yesterday there were practically 32 separate campaigns under way as members of the tenth anniversary campaign committee prepared to seek more contributions. Some made substantial increases in their own pledges, setting an immediate example.

Among these were Clarence Phelps Dodge and Arthur Hellen. Others preferred to remain anonymous. Others already had increased their gifts before the final meeting.

Among pledges of $100 or more received at the final meeting and reported by the audit unit were:

$250, Mrs. Charles I. Corby, additional; $100, Miss Mary P. Pearson, Miss Cassie Parker, H. M. Cootes, Mutual Ice Co. and Hopkins Furniture Co., Alexandria, Va.

Shoppers Back Boycott.

The League of Women Shoppers voted yesterday to support a boycott of Japanese goods in a special meeting at the American Association of University Women's clubhouse. Mrs. Elizabeth Wheeler Coleman presided.

House Interrupts Farm Bill Debate For Dewey Eulogy

The House yesterday paused briefly in its debate of the farm bill to listen to a eulogy of Admiral George Dewey, "Hero of Manila Bay," in commemoration of the centennial of his birth.

While Dewey's birthday does not occur until December 26, the State of Vermont, where Dewey was born, has by an act of its Legislature decreed that the whole month of December be observed as an anniversary.

Representative Cochran (Democrat), of Missouri, charged the Senate with holding up a bill to bring Dewey's flagship, the Olympia, to Washington. The measure, he said, has been passed by the House.

Autopsy Ordered In D.C.Man's Death

An autopsy will be performed today to determine whether Milton Eyler, 67, of 912 H street northwest, died of injuries received when he walked onto the side of a moving automobile at Tenth street and Florida avenue northwest last September.

At the time of the accident, Eyler told the driver of the car—Sarton Sollers, 2200 block Wyoming avenue northwest—that he was not injured. Three hours later he was found unconscious in front of a building near his home. At Emergency Hospital he was found to have a fracture of the leg and internal injuries.

Edwin W. Davis, 74, of 3822 Eighth street northwest, contractor, was injured seriously yesterday when he was caught between two moving street cars at Fifteenth and G streets northwest. At Emergency Hospital he was said to have a possible fracture of the skull, fracture of the arm and internal injuries.

Otis M. Raines, 26, of Riverton, W. Va., was treated at Freedmen's Hospital for a fracture of the arm received when his truck collided with a street car at Third street and Rhode Island avenue northwest.

McCarran Renews His HOLC Inquiry

Still waiting a report from officers of the Home Owners Loan Corporation regarding the Group Health Association, Inc., Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada, yesterday asked Richard N. Elliott, Acting Comptroller General, to determine by what authority the HOLC used $40,000 in Federal funds to start the clinical project.

Old Deeds Ban Liquor Stores, Wheat Decides

Order May Dry 20 Blocks Between 11th, 14th, Park Rd. and Florida Ave.

Because John Sherman, who subdivided his "Stone Farms" into residential lots in 1881 was a prohibitionist, a densely populated metropolitan Washington area of some 20 blocks may soon be without a single liquor store.

Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat of District Supreme Court ruled orally yesterday that all property in the area in Columbia Heights is controlled by an antiliquor covenant Sherman inserted in the deeds when the lots were sold 56 years ago.

The area in question is bounded by the east side of Fourteenth street to the west side of Eleventh street, thence to the south side of Park road and the north side of Florida avenue.

Nine property owners in that area sued to inforce the covenants.

Stores affected by the ruling will be George Jameson, 2825 Fourteenth street northwest; Smith's Drug Store, 2435 Fourteenth street northwest; Barney Goldstein, 3101 Fourteenth street northwest; George Garoufes, 2900 Eleventh street northwest, and the Little Tavern Shop, 3031 Fourteenth street northwest.

The licensees claimed that the character of the neighborhood had so changed that the 56-year old covenant was not binding and that it was for that reason nonenforceable.

Those who sued to enjoin the sale of liquor were George H. Brown, 1357 Euclid street northwest; John M. and Lillian Mapes Boteler, 1111 Clifton street northwest; Clifford E. Kittler, 1316 Euclid street northwest; John M. and Edie Gertrude Stewart, 1353 Euclid street northwest; James W. Crabtree, 1304 Euclid street northwest, and Harry L. and Ioshia B. Murray, 1363 Euclid street northwest.

While only five stores were affected by the ruling, according to attorneys James Wilkes and James Artis, the decision may affect the license board in future applications. It was emphasized that none of those affected would be placed under the ban until an appeal is heard and a final ruling by the higher courts is had.

Educator Will Speak.

Dean Wallace B. Donham, of the Harvard University Business school, will address a dinner meeting of the Harvard Graduate Business School Association of Washington at 6:30 p. m. today at the Cosmos Club. E. B. Brownell, president of the association, will preside.

D. C. Women Win National BridgeRating

3 Are Members of Group Topping Team-of-Four Class.

Three District women became national championship bridge players by winning the women's team-of-four event in the American Contract Bridge League Tournament yesterday at the Shoreham Hotel. They are Mrs. James H. Lemon, Mrs. Martin R. West and Mrs. A. P. Stockvis. Fourth member of the team was Mrs. R. C. Young, a Pennsylvanian.

The Charles E. Coffin trophy now passes from the custody of the coast-to-coast team of Mrs. Robert B. Fuller, Mrs. A. M. Sobel, Mrs. L. G. Quigley and Miss Florence Stratford. Total boards for the local team were 39 to 38 for the defenders.

The Pittsburgh team of Mrs. H. D. Stahl, Miss Margaret Beech, Miss Janet Hardie and Miss Clara Morris finished in third place with 34 boards, half a board up on the leaders in the first session, Mrs. A. J. Steinberg, Mrs. C. W. Zimmer, Mrs. F. Samuel and Mrs. B. Robins. The latter foursome defeated a six-heart contract of Mrs. Fuller's, which lost the board for the defenders.

67 Pairs Entered.

The mixed-pair event attracted a glittering array of bridge talent. Sixty-seven pairs entered, each consisting of a man and a woman player. It was run in a three-section movement for the qualifying rounds. Eleven top pairs will qualify for the finals from Section A, ten pairs from Sections B and E, and a pair-at-large will be qualified on a per cent basis from either of these sections. Thus 32 pairs will enter the finals, to be held tomorrow afternoon.

Local pairs made a poor showing in the first qualifying round. All but one honor position in every section was won by visiting stars. Mrs. R. C. Young and Charles Goren led Section A with 230½ match points, Mrs. Sam Rush and Harry Fishbein, both of New York City, were second with 225; Maj. and Mrs. Charles Dietz, formerly of Washington, now residents of Cumberland, third with 211.

Mrs. J. A. Faulkner and P. E. Sheardown, both of Belleville, Ontario, scored 183 match points for top score in Section B; Mrs. A. P. Stockvis and Al Roth, of the local league, made 170 points, and Mrs. H. E. Latter, Wilmington, Del., and Jesse Slutt, of New York, 167 for third score.

Stars Take Part.

Leaders in Section E were Mrs. Lillian Peck and Morris Elis, New York, 168 match points; Mrs. Helen Sobel and Phil Abramsohn, New York, 157 points, and Mrs. Olive Peterson, Philadelphia, and Henry Chanin, Atlanta, third, 156½ points. Names of the leaders give an idea of the competition in the mixed pair championship. They are ranking stars of the Eastern seaboard.

The Maryland Bridge League ran the open one-session game last evening. Two amateur games were held in the afternoon, the first won by Bolling Galt and D. C. Elliott, in the North-South positions with Mrs. Edward Keyes and Mrs. J. F. Casey, second. Mrs. Roy Hackett and Mrs. Marian H. Barre won in the East-West, with F. J. Hallauer and F. C. Black, second.

Winners in the Federal Bridge League game were Mrs. Kay Davitt and J. M. Lazard, first; North-South, in section C. Mrs. Katherine Fenton and A. L. Scott, second. Elah Saunder and Elaine Carlson, top East-West; Mrs. Bolivar Lloyd and Mrs. M. R. Reddy, second.

In the second amateur game, the Washington team of C. B. Pennebrake and W. Torrey topped the team of P. E. Sheardown and O. G. Farquhason, of Belleville, Ontario. The score was 87½ to 66 match points.

Family Man

DONALD PRESTON.

Yearning of Boy To Spread Cheer Ends in Calamity

The Christmas spirit was in the air yesterday on lower F street, and Donald Preston, 12, saw and felt and heard it as he sold his newspapers.

But it meant only one thing to Donald—that he would have to make more money, for recently he has been the sole support of his mother and father and four brothers and sisters, all crowded in one room at 704 Third street northwest, with little to eat.

Donald elbowed his way past Santa and found a vendor from whom he bought some shoe laces. These he started reselling.

Business was booming when Policeman W. W. Whittemore spied Donald. Policeman Whittemore has strict orders to keep children like Donald from peddling anything but newspapers, and so he took him to the station.

Donald wasn't there long. He stared from the window and saw his father, William Preston, an unemployed construction worker, coming down the street. Soon Donald was on his way home.

Appointment Of Edgerton Faces Delay

Nomination to U.S.Court of Appeals for D. C. Awaits Study.

The nomination of Prof. Henry W. Edgerton, of Cornell University, to the United States Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia was held up yesterday as members of the Senate Judiciary Committee examined an article he wrote last spring for the Cornell Law Quarterly on the "United States Supreme Court."

Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, one of the leaders in the fight against President Roosevelt's court-reform plan, said he would recommend that Edgerton be called before the committee. Burke is chairman of the sub-committee to which the nomination was referred for report.

Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, who also is a member of the sub-committee, indicated after "a hasty reading" of the article that he believed Prof. Edgerton had not gone beyond the rights of any lawyer to criticize decisions of the court.

The thrid member of the sub-committee, Senator Van Nuys (Democrat), of Indiana, said he had not seen the article. Both Burke and Borah said it would be a day or two before the committee decided whether to send for Prof. Edgerton.

"A hasty reading of the article indicates Prof. Edgerton does not question the power of the Supreme Court to declare acts of Congress unconstitutional," Senator Borah said, "but rather surveys decisions to illustrate what the effect has been on various interests in the United States."

In his article on judicial review of acts of Congress, Prof. Edgerton is highly critical of many of the decisions of the court, but he apparently does not openly challenge the authority of the court. His discussion, however, has no bearing on the New Deal as all decisions cited were rendered prior to President Roosevelt's first inauguration.

"Whether to preserve, restrict or abolish the power of the courts to hold acts of Congress void," the articles states, "is a pure question of policy, the answer to which should depend on the character of the results which the present system has produced and is, therefore, likely to produce."

Concluding, he holds that many of the court's decisions in the past have been contrary to public interest.

SENATORS TRADE LINKE TO BROWNS FOR HOGSETT

The Washington Post Sports

20 WASHINGTON: THURSDAY, DECEMBER 2, 1937 X*

This Morning

Griff Holds Upper Hand in Nat Trades.

By Shirley Povich.

Unlike five other managers in the American League, Stanley Raymond Harris will have no free hand in the trading at the three-day sessions that open at Chicago on Monday. A white-haired gentleman by the name of Clark Griffith will have the final voice in whatever deals the Nats may make, or even consider.

POVICH.

But full power to buy, sell or swap, as they see fit, reposes in five of Harris' managerial colleagues. Mickey Cochrane, as vice president of the Tigers, needs only to suggest a trade to Owner Walter O. Briggs to gain the office to make the deal. At Chicago, Manager Jimmy Dykes likewise enjoys full power to buy or trade as he wills. Joe Cronin can spend Tom Yawkey's money as he likes, and Joe McCarthy always has Col. Ruppert's check book available. Manager Connie Mack happens to be the president of the Athletics and can hardly quarrel with himself.

With the Washington, St. Louis and Cleveland clubs, however, the managers may possibly be hamstrung by the ownerships' disapproval of deals. Gabby Street, of the Browns, and Oscar Vitt, of the Indians, are newcomers to the league's managerial ranks and do not yet enjoy the full confidence of their owners. It has always been the policy of those two clubs to reserve final say in any deals their managers contemplate.

Harris Fortunate.

The same is true of the Washington club, but the fact is, Bucky Harris does not consider himself handicapped by Griffith's reservation of the right to pass on all deals. In fact, Harris has often declared that he is fortunate to have Griffith on his side in the matter of deals. He was saying so before he entrained early this week for the trading sessions.

"The situation on the Washington club is different," Harris was saying. "We have a club owner who knows baseball thoroughly, which is more than can be said for every other owner in the league except Connie Mack. Mr. Griffith is baseball wise and you only need to look at his trading record to confirm that.

"Other managers might go to their club owners and try to make a deal by saying Joe Dokes hasn't got a fast ball or that John Doe can't go to his right for a ground ball or that John Smith can't hit those high hard ones, and other managers can get away with it, but the Washington manager can't.

"Mr. Griffith knows as well as his manager what a ball player can do and what he can't do and he has saved his managers many a boner. I'll take his opinion of a ball player as quick or quicker than I'd take my own. Other managers don't have a wise old owl like Mr. Griffith helping 'em out with that kind of judgment."

Respects Judgment.

How about that deal that Griffith blocked three years ago when Detroit offered you Pete Fox for Fred Schulte, Bucky? You remember how they called it off when Griffith insisted the Tigers throw in Elden Auker, too.

"That's true enough," Bucky admitted, "but everybody is entitled to a share of mistakes. But Griffith didn't take such a bad beating on it. He unloaded Schulte to the Pirates for $10,000 and you only have to look at the books to realize what a swell trader Griffith has been for the Washington club.

Griffith's greatest achievement was, of course, his sale of Joe Cronin to the Red Sox for $250,000, but he narrowly missed on a deal that would have outstripped the Cronin sale as a rare piece of salesmanship.

During the winter of 1935-36, after the [illegible]gers had won two pennants and the Yankees had been pennantless for three years, the New York club was frantic to buy Buddy Myer, who the season before had won the league batting title.

Nearly Made Deal.

At the Chicago trading session, Col. Ruppert broached a deal for Myer and Griffith laughed him off. Finally Ruppert insisted that Griffith set a price on Myer. Griffith did. His price was $500,000.

"And do you know," said Griffith a few days later after the Yanks had given up hope of buying Myer, "that Ruppert almost made the deal with me. He actually was going to give the Washington club $400,000 and Second Baseman Tony Lazzeri for Myer, until Ed Barrow, his business manager stopped him. If Barrow hadn't have been around that night, I'd have made a $400,000 sale."

Myer, incidentally, has been oftmentione as trading material during the coming meeting, but despite the recurrent reports, Griffith will not part with his second baseman. He has confided to his friends in Washington that Myer at the fag end of last season was the best ball player on the Washington team and that the Nats' 1938 plans definitely included him at second base.

Flying Eagles Seek.

The Flying Eagles, unlimited basketball team, has the Roosevelt HighSchool gymnasium on Tuesday nights and would like to book games for those or any other nights of the week. Call Manager Hands, at NO. 4651.

American League Managers Lay Groundwork for Winter's Swaps

Manager Joe Cronin (left), of the Red Sox, and Manager Bucky Harris, of the Nats, spar for a common topic amid the trade talk at the minor league meeting at Milwaukee where the big league pilots have foregathered this week.

Manager Mickey Cochrane (left), of the Tigers, and Manager Jimmy Dykes, of the White Sox, appear very serious about something and the guess is that Cochrane would like to have one of Dykes' pitchers. Dykes could use a third baseman.

50,000 Fans To See Pros' Title Battle

Giants Bolster Line-up; Redskins Practice at Country Club.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Rye, N. Y., Dec. 1.—Washington's Redskins were bivouacked here in the swank of the Westchester Country Club tonight, labeled as the 7-to-5 under dog in Sunday's battle with the Giants at the Polo Grounds.

New York betting men have installed the Giants as the favorites to beat the Redskins and win the Eastern title in the National League on the strength of the superior defensive record of the New York Club. In 10 games against sterner opposition than the Redskins have encountered, the Giants have yielded only 60 points to the 106 scored against the Washington Club.

The Redskins departed from Washington this afternoon and immediately on their arrival here set up headquarters at the Westchester Club. Coach Ray Flaherty tonight called the squad for a blackboard drill to outline a defense for the Giants' plays.

Giants at Physical Peak.

The Giants on Sunday will be at their physical peak for the season. Tuffy Leamans, handicapped by a sore foot for several weeks, is mending rapidly and Dale Burnett, who has been absent from the line-up in recent games, will return to the backfield. Ed Widseth, giant tackle; Larry Johnson, guard, and Ray Hanken, end, will also be available for starting duty.

Fifty thousand fans are expected to be in the stands when the opening whistle sounds Sunday, with New York needing only a tie to gain the right to meet the Chicago Bears in the East-West playoff for the league championship. The sale of tickets continued apace in Washington today and 5,000 Capital fans are expected to be present.

The Redskins' 13-3 victory in the opening game of the season stands as one of the two defeats the Giants have encountered in the league this year. In that game, Sammy Baugh completed 10 of 14 attempted passes, the largest number completed against the Giants all year.

Seek Defense for Baugh.

The Giants are concentrating on a defense for Baugh's passes, particularly since last week's 13-13 tie with Brooklyn in which Ace Parker tossed panic into Giant ranks with his aerial tosses.

For Baugh's passes and Riley Smith's field-goal kicking, the Giants have a pair of capable counter threats. Ed Danowski, director of the New York club's aerial attack, actually has a better passing percentage than Baugh and the Giants' Tillie Manton has kicked more field goals this season than has Smith.

Coach Ray Flaherty tonight was contemplating a change in the backfield that last week started against the Packers. Not until Sammy Baugh entered the Redskin line-up did the Washington attack begin to function and Flaherty may use both Baugh and Cliff Battles in his starting line-up Sunday. Ernie Pinckert and Riley Smith would complete the backfield quartet.

East, Southwest Lead Country's Grid Teams

Intersectional Warfare Shows Eastern Teams With .647 Average Among Major Elevens, Mid-west, Big Ten, Only .324.

By Henry Super,

United Press Staff Writer.

New York, Dec. 1.—The East, thanks to Fordham, Pittsburgh and a couple other giants, turned in the best intersectional record of the 1937 football campaign, a United Press survey of major games showed today.

Teams on the Atlantic seabord, regarded as weak sisters in cross-country competition up to a few years ago, won 33 battles with outside elevens, lost 18 and tied 5 for an average of .477.

Next best division on the list was the Southwest, while the Midwest, once the giant of international competition, slumped to the almost unbelievable average of .324. The South, which produced a Rose Bowl team in Alabama, was only a little better with .433, while the Pacific Coast finished third in the standings with .455.

Fordham and Pittsburgh each played four intersectional contests and won all of them. The Rams subdued Texas Christian, Purdue, North Carolina and St. Mary's, while Pittsburgh defeated Notre Dame, Nebraska, Duke and Wisconsin to return eight victories for the East.

The standings:

	W.	L.	T.	Pct.
East	33	18	5	.647
Southwest	9	7	1	.563
Pacific Coast	5	6	1	.455
South	13	17	3	.433
Midwest	11	23	0	.324

The decline in Midwest fortunes was largely due to failure of Big Ten teams. Teams of that conference played in nine intersectional games and won only three—Ohio State's victory over Texas Christian, Purdue over Carnegie Tech and Michigan over Pennsylvania. Chicago lost two intersectionals, and Purdue, Iowa, Wisconsin and Ohio State one each.

In the Southwest Southern Methodist led the way with two intersectional victories and a tie. Texas Christian lost two games and Texas lost one, but others in the Southwest Conference — Baylor, Rice and the Texas Aggies—offset that by winning one each. Texas didn't play any intersectional games. The other wins and losses were accounted for by teams outside the conference.

The Southern intersectional giants were Mississippi, North Carolina, Louisiana State and Vanderbilt. All won two intersectional games each, but North Carolina lost a third, while Mississippi played an intersectional tie.

On the Coast, honors were fairly well split. Three conference teams—U. S. C., Washington and U. C. L. A.—each won an intersectional, while U. S. C. and U. C. L. A. each lost one. The other victories and defeats came from teams outside the conference, particularly Loyola, of Los Angeles, which lost two and won one.

Joe Archibald Will Feature Rialto Card

Joe Archibald, whose knockout of Lou Gevinson proved one of the summer's high lights, yesterday was signed by Matchmaker Howard Livingston to headline the Rialto Theater's initial boxing card a week from tomorrow night, December 10.

Archibald will be pitted against an outstanding opponent, to be named, over a scheduled ten-round distance.

Rising to a fifth ranking among the world's featherweights as a result of his performances here, Archibald's natural color, boxing class and potent punch have gained him hosts of followers here, going undefeated while winning a majority of his bouts on knockout.

A protege of Al Weill, manager of world's lightweight champion, Lou Ambers, Archibald previously had rejected offers to appear here following his knockout of Gevinson. In big demand elsewhere as a drawing card and popular wherever he has shown, the high ranking youngster has agreed to meet any of several opponents currently under consideration.

Enthusiastic over his success in bringing Archibald back to Washington, Livingston announced that he will back up his main event with a fighting show second to none offered here.

Boasting one of the most comfortable elevated seating arrangements in Washington's theater world, the Rialto offers a fine view of the ring from any seat in the house. The ring, a portable affair, is to be pitched above the orchestra pit, the front row of seats being removed in order that the ring may be centralized in such fashion as to improve the view.

Livingston announced yesterday that he also was in direct contact with fine fighting names for future shows and expects to announce some of his outstanding matches shortly.

Harry Mehre Quits As U. of Ga. Coach; Effective January 1

Athens, Ga., Dec. 1 (AP).—Harry Mehre, coach at the University of Georgia for ten years, resigned today. His letter of resignation was handed personally to Dr. W. O. Payne, faculty director of athletics, following the annual banquet given by the Athens Rotary Club.

Coach Mehre asked to be relieved January 1. He has been connected with the university for 14 years.

Dr. Payne said a meeting of the faculty athletic committee would be called, at a date to be announced later, to take action. He refused to comment further.

Coach Mehre had tears in his eyes as he handed Dr. Payne his letter of resignation. His football teams have won 58 games, lost 34 and tied 6 since he became head coach in 1928.

Don Hutson Makes Two Pro Marks

Green Bay End Snared 41 Passes; Manders Leads Scorers.

By the United Press.

New York, Dec. 1.—Don Hutson, Green Bay Packers' end from Alabama, shattered two individual National Football League records in pass receiving which he established last season, according to statistics released today.

Hutson snared 41 passes for 522 yards to better the 1936 mark of 34 catches for 526 yards.

Jack Manders, of the Chicago Bears, led the scorers with 68 points, 11 more than Clark Hinkle, of Green Bay, while Dutch Clark, player-coach of the Detroit Lions, was third with 45.

Cliff Battles, Washington, continued to lead the ground-gainers with 709 yards gained in 191 attempts for an average of 3.7. Hinkle was second with 552 gained in 129 tries and John Karcis, of Pittsburgh, held down third with 511 in 128.

Bob Monnett, of Green Bay, continued to head the circuit in forward passing efficiency with 37 completions in 73 attempts good for 580 yards and an average of .506. Ed Danowski, of New York, was second with 53 in 110 tries for 607 yards. Arnold Herber, of Green Bay, was third with 676 yards gained on 47 out of 104. Sammy Baugh, of Washington, although fourth, completed 70 passes in 156 attempts for a total yardage of 999.

St. Louis Southpaw Had Poor '36 Season

Veteran, 34, Has Also Served With Tigers; Enjoyed Best Season in 1935, Winning 13 Games Against 16 Losses.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Milwaukee, Dec. 1.—Pitcher Elon (Chief) Hogsett, of the St. Louis Browns, tonight was acquired by the Washington Club in a trade that sent Pitcher Eddie Linke to St. Louis.

The deal, as announced by President Clark Griffith, of the Nats, was a straight player swap, but St. Louis sources reported that a sum of cash had also been acquired by the Browns in the trade.

Griffith also revealed tonight that he had placed Catcher Rick Ferrell on the trading block. The Nats' owner attempted to make a deal with the Cleveland Indians that would bring Catcher Frankie Pytlak to the Nats in exchange for Ferrell. Cleveland rejected the offer.

Hogsett, a 34-year-old veteran of the Detroit Tigers and the Browns, for many years was famed as one of the outstanding relief pitchers in the American League. A left-hander, he had a deceptive side-arm delivery with a wide-breaking curve and a cross fire.

Given starting roles with the Browns after being traded to the St. Louis club early in the 1936 season, Hogsett was the club's most effective pitcher, winning 13 games and losing 16 with a seventh-place club two years ago.

Last season, Hogsett won 6 games and lost 19 with the seventh-place Browns. Two of his triumphs were at the expense of the Nats, however. Of Cherokee Indian-English extraction, Hogsett pitched in various minor leagues before joining Montreal in 1929. That season his 22 victories prompted Detroit to buy him. In 1936, he was traded to St. Louis by the Tigers for First Baseman Jack Burns, whom the Tigers needed as a replacement for the injured Hank Greenberg.

Linke, with a tendency to take on weight, never justified his early promise with the Nats after pitching a four-hit shutout against Boston in his major league debut in 1932. He was acquired by the Nats after his sensational success with Davenport in the Mississippi Valley League, where he was the strikeout king of the circuit and fanned 17 batters in one game.

Linke has shuttled back between Washington and Chattanooga during the five years he has been the property of the Nats. Last season Linke had a record of six wins and one defeat, but only one of his triumphs was achieved in a starting role. He will be 26 next year.

Linke was famed, chiefly for two physical misfortunes during his five years with the Washington club.

In 1935, Linke figured in baseball's strangest double play when a line drive off the bat of Jess Hill bounced off his head and back to home plate, where Catcher Jack Redmond caught the ball to retire Hill and then threw it to first for a double play.

The season before Linke became something of a medical curio when his pitchnig arm suddenly lost its pulse. Physicians could detect no evidence of a pulse beat and Linke was forced to retire from pitching. The following season, with his pulse beat still far below normal, he resumed pitching, but never was he able to recapture the fast ball that was his chief stock in trade.

Mungo Bids Block All N.L. Trades

At Least 4 Clubs Seek Brooklyn Bad Boy; Reds Make Deal.

By the United Press.

Milwaukee, Wis., Dec. 1.—"Who gets Van Mungo?"

That was the big question in major league circles today as the minor leagued convention plowed through dull, routine matters and baseball nabobs engaged in small-time trading.

Until Mungo, Brooklyn's bad boy who lost almost $2,000 in fines and salary during the past year and finally finished the season under suspension at his home at Pageland, S. C., is traded, all National League deals are blocked. Mungo and Burleigh Grimes, Brooklyn pilot, just could not hit it off and were at each other's throats when the suspension came.

Four clubs, the Giants, Cubs, Cardinals and Pirates, are known to be in the market for the big fire ball right-hander, who is rated one of the greatest natural pitchers in the big show.

May Be Other Bidders.

Grimes, discussing Mungo's status today, hinted that he may have surprise offers from second division clubs for Mungo in addition to the big bidders.

Where Mungo will go is pure speculation but the Giants are believed to have the inside track. Bill Terry, Giants' boss, admits having made a very strong offer for Mungo. He told Cincinnati representatives today that he could not enter serious negotiations with them until he found out definitely whether his offer for Mungo has been accepted.

The same situation is true with the Cubs and Pirates. Those two clubs talked deals today but failed to get anywhere because of their offers in the Mungo matter. Another disclosure from the Cubs-Pirates conference was that Arky Vaughan, sought by the Cubs, isn't on the market.

Bob Quinn, business manager of the Boston Bees, dropped a hint that the Giants are the most serious bidders for Mungo when he expressed the opinion that the Cubs wouldn't get him.

"We can offer as much for Mungo as the Cubs," said Quinn. "Because Chicago doesn't want to let go of any of its key men."

Reds Make Trade.

The first important major league deal was negotiated by the last-place Cincinnati Reds in the initial move of an extensive rebuilding

California Likes 'Bama As Opponent

Bear Players Want Crack at Team Unbeaten in Coast Tilts.

By the Associated Press.

Berkeley, Calif., Dec. 1.—California's Golden Bears—who once named Pittsburgh their No. 1 choice of opponents—will be glad to see Alabama in the Rose Bowl New Year's Day.

While the California players had previously, and informally, expressed a preference to meet Pitt in the football classic at Pasadena, their reaction to Alabama was best reflected today through the views of Perry Schwartz, first-string end.

"All of the fellows are glad Alabama is coming out. They have a perfect record this year. In four other trips to the Rose Bowl they won three games and tied one. If we are lucky enough to beat them, we really will have accomplished something."

Practice December 17.

The California players, idle since they defeated Stanford November 20 to win the Pacific Coast Conference championship, will begin practice December 17, when final examinations end. Until then light exercise, take whenever the men can spare time from studies, will be the routine.

Meanwhile, Head Coach Leonard (Stub) Allison prepared to work up new plays and defensive set-ups. Not having had Alabama scouted, he kows nothing of the team's tactical maneuvers. He said he hoped to receive information before long, however.

Allison said he was not concerned over the physical condition of his squad. The starting regulars opened and finished the season without serious injury.

Priestley in Charge.

Graduate Manager Kenneth Priestley, whose announcement late yesterday that Alabama had been selected, ended a dizzy debate and guessing contest, said he would leave tomorrow for Pasadena to take charge of the California headquarters.

The ticket handling staff opened its office in the Southern city (132 East Colorado) today. Priestley pointed out that whether a public sale of tickets would be held depended on applications from alumni. Each alumnus is entitled to purchase six tickets. Applications will close December 10.

Inasmuch as California has a paid-up alumni body of 27,000 the prospects of outside buyers appeared somewhat slim. Alabama, however, will receive a block of tickets.

Priestley declared the agreement to permit alumni of Pacific Coast Conference members to purchase half a dozen pasteboards for Rose Bowl games their team plays, was made by the entire conference last year. The Rose Bowl seats approximately 85,000.

'Bama Will Resume Practice on Friday.

Tuscaloosa, Ala., Dec. 1 (U.P.).—Coach Frank Thomas arrived here late today and ordered his Alabama Crimson Tide to assemble Friday for resumption of football practice—for the Rose Bowl game with University of California.

Thomas, who was en route home from the bedside of his sick mother when announcement was made last night that the Tide had been selected to play in the bowl, expressed keen gratification that his team had been nominated.

"Alabama always has looked upon an invitation to play in the Rose Bowl as the greatest honor that can come to a football team," Thomas said. "The boys have played their hearts out and they deserve the honor.

Thomas said practices Friday and Saturday would be light but that "we will begin work in earnest Monday."

Tentative plans are for the team and approximately 300 supporters to leave December 21 and arrive in Pasadena on Christmas Day. They will travel the Southern route.

Vern Cormier Is Added to Turner's Card

Vernon Cormier, two-fisted Boston featherweight, who is known as boxing's globe-trotter, has been signed to appear next Monday night at Turner's Arena.

Cormier, who six months ago returned from a fistic tour of Europe, South America, South Africa and Australia, has been matched with Calvin Calp, of Baltimore, in an eight-round special attraction. The card features Irish Eddie Dunne, Benny Leonard's lightweight protege, and Cowboy Howard Scott, District lightweight ruler.

The Scott-Dunne match will be eight rounds.

Cormier never has boxed in Washington. However, around Boston he has been a headliner. A few months before Petey Sarron lifted the featherweight crown from Freddy Miller, Cormier lost a split decision to Miller. The Bostonian, who has boxed some of the best in the business, is managed by Ralph Gold.

Calp stole the boxing show at Baltimore recently. He is remembered for victories over Jackie Carter and Jimmy Tramberia.

George (Elbows) McFadden, the old-time scrapper, who back in the 90's scored two knockouts over Joe Gans, came out openly yesterday and predicted a victory for Scott over Dunne.

McFadden, who may help second Scott, said the Cowboy's long-range fighting was very impressive, and said that Scott, with a little more weight, probably would go very good as a welterweight.

Scott has been training diligently for the last few weeks. A victory over Dunne means a shot at either Petey Sarron or Eddie Alzek, sensational New Yorker.

Norman Selby, the Kid McCoy, Is Back, a Happy Bridegroom

By the Associated Press.

Los Angeles, Dec. 1.—Norman Selby, the Kid McCoy of fistiana, was back in town today, carrying the weight of 64 years on stout shoulders and looking the picture of a happy bridegroom.

"I've got everything straightened out at last," he said.

With him was dark-haired Mrs. McCoy No. 9, whom he married August 2 at Rushville, Ind.

It was 13 years ago he left to serve a manslaughter term for the fatal shooting of Mrs. Theresa Mors, a divorcee he was engaged to marry. But he is free, now.

"Listen, boys," the one-time middleweight champion of the world said, "this is what I've learned in 64 years. The easy dough is the hardest to hang onto. . . . the bright lights go out the darkest.

"Liquor and Kid McCoy don't mix—I haven't taken a drink in 13 years, and I don't expect to ever again.

"I'm not knocking anything, and I'm not preaching. I'm the same old kid. Just learned a few things, that's all."

The oldtime fighter was paroled to Henry Ford in July, 1932, and has been employed since by the Ford company in Detroit. He took a three months' leave of absence, he said, to drive West.

Six Matches Face Card Ring Team

Duke Match in Durham Lone Out-of-Town Attraction.

Well fortified in every position Coach Eddie LaFond is sending his 1938 Catholic University boxing team through its paces. Confronted with a formidable six-match schedule, the Cardinals are losing no time in preparing for the season.

Even the loss of Joe Bunsa, middleweight, has failed to materially weaken the Cardinals. Joe is recovering slowly from an operation.

Five of the six Cardinal matches are to be featured in the Catholic University gymnasium, a match with Duke University in Durham, N. C., on Feb. 5 being the only attraction scheduled elsewhere.

Otherwise, the Cardinals are featuring their annual meeting with Maryland, scheduled for Brookland on February 5, and also are to face Western Maryland, Villanova, Pittsburgh and City College of New York here.

In an effort to fill the vacancy presented by the inability of Bunsa to compete, LaFond has shifted Salvatore Greco back to the 165-pound class and is nominating Fred Stant, a promising sophomore, for the 165-pound spot. Jay Turner is fighting at 175 pounds and big Leo Katalinas, 230-pound heavyweight slugging star, reported for his first workout yesterday.

In the lighter classes, Jack Bernstein, undefeated 118-pounder, looms as probably the best bet. Tex Guinan, 125 pounds; Nestor Martinez, 135 pounds, and Capt. Fred Mix, 147 pounds, round out the fighting order.

The schedule:

January 22, Western Maryland, Brookland; 29, University of Maryland, Brookland. February 5, Duke University, Durham; 12, Villanova College, Brookland; 19, Pittsburgh, Brookland. March 3, City College of New York, Brookland.

Beyer Rolls Record Set In Pin Loop

Wright Leads Bankers; Allied Roofing Paces Recreation League.

George Beyers, rolling for the Analysts team, in the Dynamite League, set an all-time league mark last night at Arcadia when he totaled 409 for the three-game set, 5 pins over F. C. Shelton's set in the 1934-35 season. Beyers also rolled high game for the night with 139.

The Analysts completed a sweep of the night's honors by winning game and set honors with respective 561 and 1,630 totals, the latter only one pin from an all-time league mark.

Al Wright, a member of the American Security & Trust, No. 1, won high-game honors in the Bankers League at Arcadia with 152 and set of 393. Wright's team won team set honors with 1,746, while Union Trust won game honors with 620.

The Allied Roofing Co. team, led by Perce Wolfe's 380, handed the leading Marlboro Hotel a 2-1 setback in the Recreation League last night at Recreation Alleys.

The second place University Shop, paced by Irwin Simon's 382, Pinkey Bradt's 377, Dave Groth's 372 and Hokie Smith's 367 took a 2-1 decision from Herzog's. Astor Clarke, with 374, was high for the losers. University Shop turned in a new season record with an 1,836 set.

Terry's Home Appliance Co., aided by Hollis' 389 and Fred Murphy's 380, swept their set from Marvins Credit Co. Cooke Press, led by Karl Gochenour's 383 and Norman Leese's 373, won the odd game from Blanken's Restaurant, despite Perkin's 376 and Price's 361.

Bergman's Wildcats, paced by Sam Simon's 394 and Bucky Harris' 373, swept their set from Blanken's Restaurant, Cordell, with 383, was high for the losers.

Post Notes on HUNTING

By Bill Ackerman.

The Post's All Outdoors Editor.

Opening day for the duck shooting season (Saturday) was all that could be asked for. Overcast and dark enough in the early morning so that the no shooting restriction until 7 a. m. was off before the birds really started to fly.

And how they were flying—not singly and in small bunches as they have been doing for the past two years, but in veritable clouds, until the sky was almost obscured.

The reports that we have been getting for the past few weeks seemed rather optimistic, just as they generally are every year before the season is on, only to fall flat with the commencement of shooting.

But this year is something else; the reports are materializing, for only about one in ten first-day hunters that did not get their limit bag of ten.

In the Occuquan Bay section, which supplies the closest good shooting, there wasn't a blind that didn't have the limit if the hunters cared to shoot it. In one of the Deep Hole Club blinds, Chaplain Phillips, of the Senate, and his hunting companion had their 20 ducks, all of them scaup, and were on their way back to Washington by 1 p. m.

Bartley Davis and Charles Drury, of Occoquan, both got their limit from another of the club blinds. Frank Davis, also from Occoquan, fell short of his limit, as did his companion.

Reeve Hoover's party from Washington, shooting from one of Bob Burdette's blinds, had no trouble in getting their quota of mallards and blackheads. M. Andre Fiot, from the French Embassy, was in another of Bob's blinds and had the same luck. But Abe Martin and George Handy, jr., of Alexandria, fell down a little—they bagged but 12. George Emmons, local shell purveyor, had ten nice mallard and blackheads.

* * * *

These blackheads are not the black duck that is almost native to the Potomac, but are really scaup and variously called bay blackhead, bluebill, broad ill and shovelers. Their head, neck and part of their back is black with a purple sheen in the male, while the female is more brownish or cinnamon, with a white spot on the cheek. They are often confused with the lesser scaup, which is merely a smaller edition. They are found in almost all Marylnad and Virginia waters that contain suitable food.

They are fast flyers and decoy well, but they are also divers, and when compelled to do so will feed on fish, which makes their flesh decidedly "fishy" at times.

For hunters strange to the shooting grounds along the Potomac we would like to note that there is along the whole length of the river none better than those around and in Occoquan Bay.

* * * *

Bob Burdette has several blinds that may be obtained along with a guide for a very reasonable fee. His Duck Inn, just 25 miles down the Richmond road, is easily reached, but remember there are only about 26 hunting days, and it is necessary to make your arrangements ahead, by telephone if you like—Norton 10-F-13.

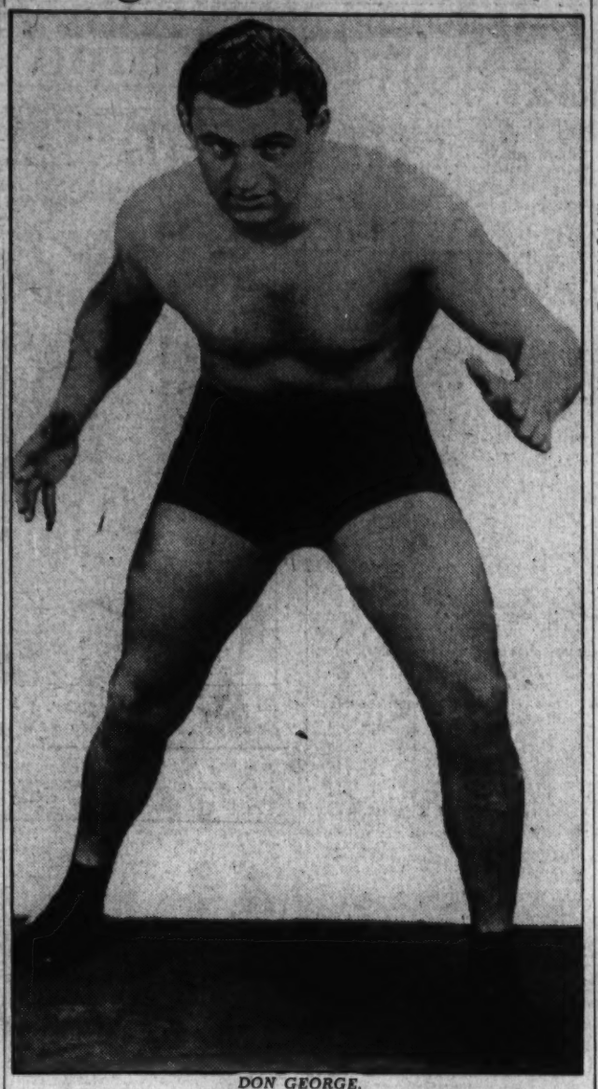
Reports show a flight of canvasback ducks and redheads on the Susquehanna Flats that is almost twice the size of those of the past three years. Various estimates place the number as being anywhere from fifty to two hundred and fifty thousand, but to the duck hunter this means nothing more than the hope for a quick return of the shooting of these "birds of the gourmet." It is not permitted to shoot them this year.

Mallards, blackheads, baldheads and widgeon are also there in numbers that promise a great deal of sport for this section during the next four weeks.

Polo Series Delayed.

San Francisco, Dec. 1 (AP).—An elbow injury suffered by Eric Tyrell-Martin, eight-goal captain of the California All-Stars, forced postponement of today's third match of the California-Mexico polo series. The match may be played Friday, with a fourth contest Sunday. Mexico won the first two.

Don George Grapples Singer on Mat Card



DON GEORGE.

Ed Don George, the colorful grappler, who once held the title of world's champion, will make his 1937 debut at Turner's Arena tonight on the card calculated to offer a "new deal" in local wrestling.

Don George, mastodonic former University of Michigan athlete, who won the title from Dynamite Gus Sonnenberg only to lose it and regain it from Henri De Glane, will pit his mat skill against Jack Singer, the California bad man, in a double wind-up match.

In another double wind-up affair Steve (Crusher) Casey, the mighty man from County Kerry, who is recognized as champion in New England, battles Len Macaluso, former all-American from Colgate University.

Both matches will be one fall to a finish.

Of especial interest is the debut of Jesse James, Jack Pfefer's latest Greek sensation. James meets one Henry Kulkowich, of Russia, in a special 30-minute bout.

A former acrobat, James has made rapid strides in the mat game and is considered the "find" of the season.

Vanka Zeleznaik, of Poland, makes his bow in a match with Billy Hanson, and Pawdey Mack, of Ireland, another newcomer, faces Jack Zarnos, of Greece. They are 30-minute bouts.

Promoter Turner announced that he had signed up Billy Bartush, the clever California ace, for a match with one of the winners in the double wind-up matches. Bartush hasn't been seen here in a long time.

Singer, who meets Don George, is a performer on the type of George Koverly—a regular villain who stops at nothing.

Casey in his few appearances at the Arena has made very favorable impressions. He ties up with a regular wildcat in Macaluso, the chap whom scored 147 points while performing for Colgate's backfield some seven years ago.

First bout is at 8:30.

Greyhounds Open Florida Race Season

Dogs, Horses to Feature Fifty Million Dollar Wagering.

By the Associated Press.

Miami, Fla., Dec. 1.—Fleet greyhounds opened Florida's $50,000,000 racing season tonight with inaugural dashes at the Biscayne Kennel Club here and the Hollywood track, 16 miles north of Miami.

Officials predicted upward of $50,000,000—the State record sum wagered last season—would pass through the parimutuel machines at the dog and two horse tracks and one jai-alai (Spanish ball game) fronton before next April 10, when the season closes.

Patrons attending tonight's inaugurals saw the dog tracks using finish cameras for the first time.

Other greyhound meetings are to open at Tampa, December 25; Palm Beach, Jacksonville, St. Petersburg and the Sanford-Orlando track December 27; Sarasota, December 31; Miami Beach, January 3, and Miami (West Flagler), January 17. The jai-alai games start here December 25.

Horse racing begins at Tropical Park here December 20. Hialeah Park opens January 12, with Tropical reopening March 7 for a second meeting.

A permit has been issued for a third horse track, headed by Joseph M. Smoot at Hollywood, but a racing plant has not yet been built there. The opening track date is February 3.

Rose Bowl Bid Loss Saddens Fordham.

By Jack Cuddy.

New York, Dec. 1.—Rose Bowl dreams are blasted on Rose Hill.

Today was gloomy Wednesday on the Fordham campus. Deepest disappointment enveloped faculty, students, football players and coaches. Their disillusionment was doubly pathetic because the Rose Bowl had been raised so close to their lips.

Only yesterday a New York afternoon newspaper carried an erroneous headline stating that Fordham's unbeaten Rams had been approached by California regarding possibilities of accepting a Bowl bid. Students scurried among the great stone buildings waving the paper and shouting the glad tidings to their friends.

Apparently the story spread even to California because "Sleepy Jim" Crowley, the Rams' coach, received messages of congratulation from the coast. The report soon was proved untrue, but Fordham hopes of an invitation were still high.

Then—out of the night came the crushing blow. Over the press association wires came a bulletin from Berkeley, Calif.: "Kenneth Priestley, graduate manager of athletics at University of California, announced that the University of Alabama had accepted an invitation to meet California in the Rose Bowl, etc."

This bulletin was phoned to Tim Cohane, Fordham's director of publicity, where he and his assistants were keeping "a death watch." Over the telephone you could hear Cohane's heart sink. "That's the toughest news I ever heard," he said. "Well—I might as well phone the others. They'll be terribly disappointed."

Jack Coffey, white-haired graduate manager of athletics, admitted his disappointment, but added, 'California made the choice. And the only thing we can do now is to offer our congratulations to Alabama. They have a good team down there at Tuscaloosa—too.' The football players were notified this morning.

Yes indeed, the atmosphere on Rose Hill was much different today, particularly in the big athletic building where Coffey and Cohane have their offices. Yesterday smiling reporters paraded in and out of those offices getting last minute data on the Rams, data that they could pour into their stories when the invitation arrived and was accepted.

WestEnd Handicap To Leading Article At Fair Grounds

Fair Grounds, New Orleans, Dec. 1 (AP).—Leading Article, gelding owned by B. P. Woodson, chalked up his second victory in as many starts here this winter when he carried top impost of 120 pounds to victory in the 6 furlongs of the West End Handicap, feature of the afternoon's Fair Grounds' program. Well handled by Jockey Paul Keester, Leading Article dominated his race from the start and, handling his steady impost well, he always holds Mrs. V. Wyse's Bachelor Dinner safe.

Bachelor Dinner was best of the others and clung to the winner's heels but was not good enough. Mrs. A. M. Creech's Reaping was third and Buster Boy fourth.

Balmy, sunshiny weather, a lightning fast track and the successes of many favorites made up a splendid afternoon of sport. Leading Article stepped the 6 furlongs in 1:12 flat, the fastest time of the meeting for that distance. He paid $6.20 for $2.

WITH BILL BENNINGS

Dear Al: Selections at Charles Town.

Clocker Mike proved that he was in excellent form by predicting that the track would be good today. It was as heavy as Madame Fatima's earrings. Steward T. C. Bradley was right on the job this morning. He had a meeting of the jockeys and told them what to expect if they get out of line. Charles Town's twin beauties were in their regular places on the rail and sporting white hats. President Al Boyle received in his clubhouse office. The sheriff and former horse owner reported in plenty of time for the first race. Jack Carpenter, "The voice of Charles Town," was wearing a new broadcasting booth. Silent Mickey Brooks, custodian of the Maryland press boxes, was on hand in a nonprofessional way, vacationing before leaving for Florida. John Manfuso came up on the race special. He goes to California this winter to see his Aneroid run in the Santa Anita Handicap. James, the busman, is on the job again. He leaves Twelfth and New York avenue at 10:30 a. m. each day and promises that 100 per cent service that he dispensed going to and from the Maryland tracks. The valets turned out in uniforms featured by tan wind-breakers. Mafuta's victory in the third race was the maiden win of Apprentice Jockey B. Hacker. BILL.

First race—Moth Wing was educated on the big tracks and seems headed for bigger things at this course. In the hands of good conditioners and I expect no mistakes. Riotus finished with good courage in Maryland races and is dangerous if in action. Tai Tai, off Delaware form, would have a chance.

Second race—Monologue likes this course and probably will find conditions suitable for a good race. I'm going to string along. Kindle is said to be in good shape and ready for a good effort. Boulderdam to take care of the others.

Third race—Story Time was a hard luck horse in Maryland and was knocked out of several chances to finish in the pay. With clear sailing this fellow might take it all. Cloudy Weather will like the off track. Makalaw for the show end.

Fourth race—Miss Twinkie, second on the also eligible list, showed enough at Bowie to warrant selection in this field. Penway carries much weight but is destined to be a keen contender if not with the winner. Rancilla is in light and should be close. Fife has worked well.

Fifth race—Golden Vein should take this field into camp if in action. Whizzaway has worked well over this oval and is dangerous. Sea Dove will be on the home grounds and could awake.

Sixth race—Ebony Parasol is bred for the going that probably will prevail. Needs only the right ride. Inactive and Departed appear best of the other eligibles. Jim John on the reserve list, would have to be dealt with if he goes.

Seventh race—Jimmy D., is far down the list and a doubtful starter but will be there at pay off time if sent postward. Wittekind is at home on this track. The Swagman to show.

Best bet—Golden Vein.

Cotton Droops; December 7.85

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—Cotton eased today, influenced by larger private crop estimates and nervousness over Washington developments on the farm bill. March dropped from 7.97 to 7.90 and closed at the low, with final prices 4 to 6 points net lower.

The market opened 2 points higher to 3 lower, with steadier Liverpool cables counterbalanced by active Wall Street selling. There was also some foreign and Southern selling late in the session. As a whole, business was small and price movements narrow.

Wheat Whirls Up With Havoc In Argentine

Maximum Price Rise Is 4 Cents in Chicago, 5 Cents in Winnipeg.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 1.—Wheat values whirled upward about 4 cents a bushel maximum in Chicago today and 5 cents at Winnipeg.

Sensational advices of severe damage to crops in Argentina, together with a spirited revival of export demand for United States wheat were largely responsible. Germany, it was asserted, bought more than 1,000,000 bushels of United States hard winter wheat, and in addition Mexico took 500,000 bushels of domestic red winter. Besides, some lots of Canadian wheat were also purchased for shipment overseas.

Despite late reactions on account of selling to realize profits, Chicago wheat futures closed 1⅜-3⅛ cents above yesterday's finish; December, 92¾@92⅞; May, 91¾@91⅞; July, 86½@86⅝. Corn, ¼-⅝ up. December, 52⅛@52½; May, 55⅝@56. Oats, varying from ¼ decline to an equal advance. Rye showing a 1½-2 cents bulge, and provisions unchanged to 17 cents jump.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, Dec. 1 (AP).—(United States Department Agriculture.)—Trading was very slow in the Boston wool market today. Occasional calls for small quantity of domestic wools were received from worsted manufacturers. Average 12-month Texas wools were moved around .70 scoured basis. Graded combed ⅜th blood territory wool was sold at .62 to .67 scoured basis. A little fine Ohio Delaine wool was sold at .31 to .33 in the grease.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Drift Lower in Less Active Trading; U. S. Bonds Firm; Commodities Steady.

New York, Dec. 1.—United States bonds were slow but firm, commodity futures rose a little and stocks declined gently to close near the bottom in slack trading. Opening prices for stocks were irregularly higher and in most cases they were the best for the day. Stock turnover was less than a million shares, the smallest in two months. May wheat rose 2¾ cents to 91¾ cents a bushel.

Stocks moved too listlessly to encourage tape watching. United States Steel was unchanged at its opening price of 55⅝, rose a fraction, and then fell more than a point in the last hour. Chrysler was quoted 1½ points lower at 56 in the late trading, after a forenoon price of 57½, which also was unchanged from the previous closing sale. Only two stocks—Steel and Anaconda—had a sales volume of more than 10,000 shares by the end of the third hour.

Building construction and copper stocks, along with the steels, were lower, but their decline was gradual. So much argument has been dug up to show why no increase in building activity can take place until wage levels recede (and that will not come right away), that the market is losing its enthusiasm of a few days ago for that class of stocks. American Radiator reported an increase in operations at one of its plants in anticipation of better business, but the stock was barely steady.

Motor Sales.

General Motors ranged fractionally lower. For all the talk in some quarters about unimpaired farm-purchasing power, motor salesmen in the rural districts, in many parts of the country, at least, do not hope next year to equal this year's sales volume. American Woolen issues were supported around their previous closing levels. Continental Diamond Fibre dipped more than a point on dividend suspension. Gulf, Mobile & Northern preferred continued to harden on dividend resumption announced yesterday.

Phelps Dodge dropped a point and was not helped by the 35-cent dividend, as some traders had hoped for a larger payment. Declines of a point or more were scored by du Pont, Loew's, American Can, Goodyear, Owens Glass, Phillips Petroleum, United States Rubber preferred and General Electric and Westinghouse.

To the optimistically minded the reports of an agreement between President Roosevelt and two leading public utility executives was encouraging. Most persons in Wall Street whose views could be learned were nevertheless inclined to keep their fingers crossed until they could find something more concrete on which to base hopes of renewed purchases and expansion by the privately owned utilities. The reports of peace between the two great labor organizations scarcely brought much cheer to the markets. Meanwhile the opposition developing in Congress to the Administration's proposals to cut down expenditures on roads points to the difficulty facing any attempts to deflate at this stage.

Inflation.

When business was good, last spring, for example, it might have been easy enough for industry to take up the slack in labor and materials purchasing released by reduction in the Government's activity, but that scarcely is true now. It is the fact that as business declines the task of balancing the budget, with falling revenues and with greater pressure for relief and other expenditures, grows more difficult, which darkens the outlook, for this time the country's resources for meeting hard times will have been greatly depleted. The answer given by the speculative markets is another dose of inflation.

Trade news included a reduction in the copper price by a smelting company, a cut in Pennsylvania crude, and increases here and there of the unemployed. On the other hand the Iron Age, in its review of the steel industry, asserted that the trade thinks the current operating rate of around 30 per cent will prove to be the bottom, but that nevertheless the first quarter of next year will be a period of convalescence rather than of increased activity. It is also pointed out that the drive for lower prices, now strangely enough begun by the President, will tend for a while to hold up steel orders in the hope of better terms.

Financing.

Most Wall Street people do not expect a long term United States bond issue to be offered on the December tax date to provide for the maturing bills at that time and to anticipate the February maturities. Rather the expectation is for a choice of note issues. Some feel that a medium termed issue, of perhaps as far as eight years at 2½ per cent, would go. The way certainly will be clear for the Treasury operation. Investment firms are "not turning a wheel" at this time and no new issues are in sight.

Investment Funds Turn to Diamonds

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—An astonishing rise in diamond sales—up 23.8 per cent over 1936 figures for October—disclosed today that many wealthy families are putting their dollars into cashable brilliance. Some New York dealers ascribed the wave of buying to fear that the dollar might be cheapened.

"We have had calls from retailers for stones of three and one-half to 15 carats, worth $7,000 to $25,000 each," said L. H. Stern, partner in a Fifth avenue diamond brokerage firm.

Diamond imports for the first nine months of 1937 totaled $32,229,335 compared with $28,938,604 for all of 1936.

30% Capacity Seen as Bottom Of Steel Slump

Prospect of Large-Scale Rail Buying Looms as Favorable Factor.

New York, Dec. 1.—"The possibility that the decline in steel ingot production has been checked at approximately this week's estimated rate of 30 per cent is suggested by the course of operations in various districts, with some minor ups and downs and unchanged output elsewhere," says Iron Age in its weekly summary today. The review adds: "A sidewise movement of small swings is indicated for December followed by an upward trend in January, but of less than seasonal proportions. Despite the efforts being exerted at Washington to revive business, it is generally believed that the entire first quarter, at least, will be required for the period of convalescence from the drastic decline that has been experienced in most lines of metalworking production. In his advocacy of lower prices for materials as a stimulant for housing construction on a large scale, President Roosevelt has injected a fresh uncertainty, it being axiomatic in the steel industry that buying is withheld pending any downward adjustment of quotations.

Prices and Wages.

"The question of steel prices is so tightly bound up with high wages and prospective advances in freight rates that no easy problem is presented by the President's suggestion, considering that much of the present steel-making cost is directly traceable to the Administration's labor and taxing policies.

"Of more immediate promise than the Government's housing program is the prospect of large-scale railroad buying, provided freight rate advances are permitted by the Interstate Commerce Commission with reasonable dispatch. In hearings at Washington the prospect was held out of purchases of 100,000 cars a year and up to 2,000 locomotives a year for several years if railroad revenues are made sufficient.

"Meanwhile, railroads continue to enter orders for rails and track supplies, though their purchases of other materials are inconsequential. The Atlantic Coast Line and affiliated roads have placed orders for 50,000 tons of rails and 10,000 tons of fastenings. These roads include the Louisville & Nashville and the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis, whose orders were reported a week ago. The Norfolk & Western has issued an inquiry for 25,000 tons of rails and fastenings, the Western Pacific for 22,000 tons and the ansas City Southern for 5,000 tons. The Western Pacific is also inquiring for 400 freight cars. Car shops are quoting on 2,000 cars for the South Manchurian Railways, whose inquiry for 25 to 100 locomotives has been pending for some weeks."

Steel Employment.

New York, Dec. 1 (AP).—Steel workers employed in October 586,600; a dip of 2. 7 per cent under the 602,700 September workers, but an increase of 10 per cent over the 531,400 with steel jobs in October, 1936, the American Iron & Steel Institute announced today.

Cement 'Trust' Held Threat to Housing Setup

Restoration of Price Competition Urged by U. S. Counsel.

By the Associated Press.

A Government attorney yesterday contended success of the new housing program depended in part on restoration of price competition in the cement industry.

Walter B. Wooden, counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, made the assertion at the outset of a commission hearing into charges the Cement Institute and 75 cement companies had entered into a combination to eliminate price competition. This combination, the commission contends, caused increased prices.

Referring to the Administration's efforts to encourage home building and thus check the business slump, Wooden said:

"It is obvious that with prices and production under monopolistic restraint, increased demands, however contrived, can only fortify the forces of monopoly."

Collusion Is Denied.

George S. Leisure, counsel for the Cement Institute, contended uniformity of cement prices was due to keen competition rather than to collusion.

On Capitol Hill, meanwhile, President Roosevelt's suggestions for reducing the cost of home building drew support from the heads of two Federal agencies.

Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, told the House Banking and Currency Committee he had no fear the President's proposals would prove costly to the Government. His only fear, he added, was that the people would not take advantage of them.

Stewart McDonald, Federal Housing Administrator, estimated that construction of a $5,000 home under legislation outlined by the President would require at least a $700 down payment.

90 Per Cent Insurance Asked.

The President proposed the Government insure small housing loans up to 90 per cent of a property's appraised value, thus requiring only a 10 per cent down payment. The present insurance limitation is 80 per cent.

McDonald said charges for loan service, title search and appraisal fees probably would raise the total initial outlay to about 14 per cent.

McDonald also suggested a cost limitation on large scale projects of not less than $1,350 a room. The President proposed $1,000 a room.

During Jones' testimony, Representative Wolcott, of Michigan, ranking Republican on the House committee, said he blamed the current business recession on Mr. Roosevelt's statements he intended to balance the budget and curtail creation of what Wolcott termed "manufactured credits." He asked Jones how the housing act would affect that situation:

Jones said the RFC had proved the Government could extend credit without affecting the budget. He explained that when the Government insured mortgages, it would not incur a loss until there was a default, perhaps years later. Thus, he contended, mere extension of credit through such insurance would not affect the budget from year to year.

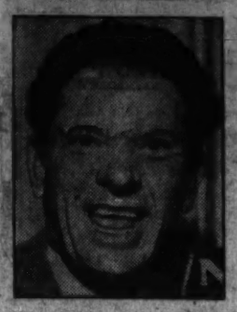
Bob Burns Says—



I never could understand why so many couples pick June as the month to get married in. I don't know whether the papers give weddings so much publicity because there's so many of 'em in June or if it's because the papers give weddings so much publicity in June that people get married in that month. But anyhow, I do know that along about this time of year there's a general falling off of weddings. I don't understand it, because wives are jest as handy to have around the house in the winter as they are in the summer.

Jest the other day I heard my Aunt Dutty talkin' and she said: "I declare my husband would be absolutely helpless without me. On these long winter evenings, when he stays home to darn his sox, I don't see what in the world he would do if I wasn't there to thread the needle for him!"
